With Wright out, Jaworski might be in

By Tom Oates

Sports reporter

It looks more and more like starting quarterback Randy Wright will not be signed by the time the Green Bay Packers officially open training camp Wednesday.

It also looks more and more like long-time Philadelphia Eagle quarterback Ron Jaworski will be in camp to greet Wright once he gets there.

Wright, a free agent, is approximately $150,000 apart on a one-year agreement with the Packers. The team is reportedly offering a base salary of about $315,000; Wright is asking for about $475,000.

Unless Wright's agent, Rick Schaeffer, and Tom Braatz, the Packers' executive vice president of football operations, make a significant amount of progress today, it is unlikely Wright will be in camp by Wednesday.

"Our only hope is that when the 11th hour strikes that they realize we are determined to reach a reasonable contract agreement and that they make some adjustment in their offer to us." Schaeffer said Monday.

Schaeffer termed the contract proposals "quite far apart," and said no date has been set for additional talks. He said it would take at least one full day of negotiations to reach an agreement.

Wright started every game last season and made $185,000 in base salarv. The former University of Wisconsin quarterback was a sixth-round draft pick in 1984.

Jaworski, 36, said over the weekend on his Philadelphia radio show that his agent, John Langel, would meet with Braatz on Monday in Green Bay. Jaworski, a free agent, said Langel would return to Philadelphia with the Packers' offer and that he might sign with them this week if the terms were satisfactory.

Jaworski reportedly is asking for $450.000 a year.

"I don't think there will be anything for a few days," Packer coach Forrest Gregg said. "The ball is in their court right now."

The Packers were interested in Jaworski early in the summer, but cooled when they acquired David becomes quite evident that the posi-Woodley from Pittsburgh on June 30 tion we've taken is most reasonable. for a 10th-round draft pick. They renewed their interest last Tuesday, however, saying they did so because it was apparent that Wright would not be in camp on time.

Jaworski, who has unsuccessfully shopped his services around the National Football League, rejected a Packer offer in late June, prompting the trade for Woodley. Jaworski said an opportunity to play has become more important to him than money.

There has been speculation that Braatz re-established talks with Jaworski as leverage in the Wright negotiations. However, Jaworski said the Packers were disappointed with Woodley's performance in pre-training camp workouts.

Woodley, 29, has been hampered by rustiness from a year's layoff, a sore throwing arm and a dislocated middle finger on his throwing hand. Schaeffer said a deal with Jaworski wouldn't affect his negotiations. "It is difficult and mystifying to me to understand their position," he said. "As more (quarterbacks) sign, it tion we've taken is most reasonable. But they're fixed at a point that is not acceptable to us."

Schaeffer doesn't think the rebuilding Packers will sign Jaworski for more than they would sign Wright. He cited Jaworski's age — he's 10 years older than Wright - and limited future as reasons.

"They've said they won't do that and I can't imagine any justification for their doing so," Schaeffer said. "It just doesn't seem reasonable at this Schaeffer said the Packers aren't willing to pay Wright a salary comparable to other NFL quarterbacks.

The average salary for a starting quarterback last year was $471,000. Recent signings indicate that the going rate for a quality backup quarterback is between $400,000 and $500,000 this year. The average for starters should approach $600,000.

"We're talking about backup dollars almost," Schaeffer said. "And the top starters earn three times what we

Starting quarterback Randy Wright, left, hasn't signed with the Green Bay Packers, so they've returned to veteran free agent Ron Jaworski in the hopes of bringing him to training camp.

Rangers beat Plesac in ninth

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) -Mike Stanley doubled in two runs with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Texas Rangers a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Monday night.

Stanley's hit came off Brewer relief ace Dan Plesac (4-4), who was seeking his 21st save. Plesac walked two batters in the ninth, then gave up Stanley's double to make a winner of reliever Mitch Williams (6-3).

"I had the man I wanted in there at the end," Brewer manager Tom Trebelhorn said, "but things just didn't work out. Texas has a really talented ballclub."

With Milwaukee leading, 4-3, Pete Incaviglia walked to start the ninth, but he was thrown out at third trying to advance on Larry Parrish's shallow single to left.

Curtis Wilkerson ran for Parrish, who took second on Mike Felder's throw, which nailed Incaviglia. Bob Brower pinch-hit for Oddibe McDowell, and walked as Wilkerson stole third. Stanley followed with a double to right center.

The Brewers broke a 3-3 tie in the eighth when B.J. Surhoff doubled with one out off reliever Jeff Russell. Williams came on in relief and Surhoff stole third and scored on Jim Gantner's groundout to shortstop.

Surhoff was four-for-four with two runs batted in.

Bill Wegman pitched 71/3 innings, allowing three runs and nine hits. It was the 16th time in 22 starts that Wegman has pitched at least seven innings.

Ranger starter Bobby Witt went 61/3 innings and allowed three runs on

The Brewers chased Witt in the seventh and took a 3-2 lead when Felder led off with a single, stole second, and scored on Robin Yount's sin-

Texas tied the score in the bottom of the seventh when McDowell tripled with one out and scored on Stanley's sacrifice fly.

The Brewers took a 1-0 lead in the fourth on a one-out double by Glenn Braggs and Surhoff's RBI single with two out.

In the bottom of the fourth, the Rangers took a 2-1 lead when Scott Fletcher led off with a single and Ruben Sierra hit his 18th home run of the season.

Milwaukee tied the score, 2-2, in the top of the sixth when Ernest Riles walked with two outs and scored all the way from first on Surhoff's hitand-run single to left.

The Brewers and Rangers play again tonight and Wednesday night. Both games will be televised on the Brewer network (Ch. 47 in Madison).

When will baseball hire women?

By Robin Finn

©N.Y. Times News Service

When Pam Postema dresses for work, she changes her clothes in a corner of a concrete locker room shared by three male co-workers.

In many minor-league stadiums, this fourperson umpiring crew strings up a curtain to afford Postema her privacy as she transforms herself with oversized clothes and padding from a slender 33-year-old woman to organized baseball's only female umpire.

In all other phases of their job, they say, Postema is treated without deference. She has become just one of the crew, they say.

How the umpires in the major leagues, who consider theirs an exclusive club, would respond to Postema's invasion of their lockerroom routine remains a matter of speculation and worry to her co-workers.

"I always wait until the last minute to ponder things like that," Postema said. "I'm more worried about just getting there. Now that I've made it to Triple A, it's almost like none of this will mean anything unless I get to the majors."

Whether baseball is ready for the advancement of Postema and the sprinkling of other women, most of whom toil in the front office in supplemental roles, is unresolved.

'Baseball isn't just a man's world, it's a good ol' boy business, and you've got to play by their rules if you want to survive," said Frances Crockett, the president and general manager of the Charlotte O's, the Baltimore Orioles' Class AA farm team in North Carolina.

"But that doesn't mean a woman can't do it. You don't have to be a player to understand marketing. But do I think they'll call any of us up to be vice presidents or GMs in the majors? That's a long time coming."

This summer, organized baseball promised to examine its hiring mechanism for jobs of consequence both on and off the field in an effort to open such jobs to qualified members of minority groups, including women. Of the approximately 250 jobs of rank on the majorleague teams, about a dozen belong to women.

"Their past record doesn't speak well for them," Robin Monsky said of baseball's executive fraternity. She is the former Atlanta Braves public relations director who last month filed a Title VII sex discrimination suit against the team in federal court.

Monsky, who was not allowed into the Atlanta clubhouse nor on the team bus, feuded with manager Chuck Tanner for months before being reassigned last June and dismissed

Of the three female owners, Boston's Jean Yawkey and San Diego's Joan Kroc received their teams upon their husbands' deaths, while Marge Schott, a widow who assumed control of her late husband's business holdings, purchased the Cincinnati Reds in a burst of civic pirit. None of the three has appeared inclined to make a point of hiring other women.

"I think it will take a woman owner to hire a woman to manage the front office," said Karen Paul, who over 13 years has worked her way from bookkeeper to vice president and business manager of the Class AA El Paso Diablos, a Milwaukee Brewer farm team.

Schott, whose team will host next year's All-Star Game, recently appointed two women to serve as co-ordinators for the event, according to Cincinnati's general manager, Bill Bergesch.

"Marge is an active owner in that she comes to the ball club every day," Bergesch said. "But she hasn't interfered with me or Pete Rose in any way on the player end of things. At this moment, I'd say the scouting end of it is a spot reserved for men, but in virtually every other area of the business, there's a place for women."

Crockett, who learned the baseball business after her family bought the Charlotte team, sought out a succession of mentors to help her after she took over in 1977.

"In the beginning, I was treated like I had three heads and no brain, not by other owners, but by the GMs, the baseball boys," she said. "They insinuated I was just a figurehead and my brothers were really running the club. The hostility was subtle, but it was there."

Carner three-putts her way into Open playoff threesome

By Reid Hanley

©Chicago Tribune

PLAINFIELD, N.J. — History was made Monday at the 42nd U.S. Women's Open when JoAnne Carner threeputted the 72nd hole at Plainfield Country Club.

It meant the tournament will be extended a sixth day, making it the longest United States Golf Association Open of any kind - men, women or seniors. Carner, Japan's Ayako Okamoto and England's Laura Davies will tee off today in an 18-hole playoff. (ABC will show highlights at 3 p.m. CDT)

The leaders finished at 3-under-par 295 for 72 holes, four shots ahead of Betsy King and Jody Rosenthal.

Two extra days became necessary because of Sunday's rain suspension and the playoff. The tournament will surpass the 1931 U.S. Open, when Billy Burke and George Von Elm tied after 72 holes at Inverness Club in Toledo, then played a pair of 36-hole playoffs. Burke won by a single shot after five days.

If another tie occurs, there will be a sudden-death playoff. The 1983 Senior Open ended in sudden death because Billy Casper and Rod Funseth tied after 18 playoff holes. Casper won the title on the first extra hole. The tournament was headed for the books regardless.

If Carner had two-putted on 18 from 20 feet on the fringe, she would have become the oldest winner of the Women's Open. Fay Crocker of Uraguay was 40 years and 11 months when she won the 1955 Women's Open. Carner is 48 years, 3 months and 23 days. A two-putt would have given Carner nine USGA championships, tying Bobby Jones for the record.

"I blew it," Carner said.

That was too harsh an assessment of her round. She had tied the course record of 3-under 69, making up three shots on Okamato, the third-round leader. Despite horrid exhibitions of putting on two holes, Okamoto shot even par 72, while Davies shot 71.

Carner made 11 straight pars before she birdied at the 13th hole to tie Okamoto and Davies. She took the lead outright with a four-foot birdie on the par-5 17th hole.

Carner came to 18 with a one-stroke lead over Okamoto and Davies. Her second shot, a 6-iron from 145 yards on the 350-yard par 4, was long and to the right of the flag. It rolled off the putting surface onto the fringe.

A couple of points in rebuttal to Terry Kaber and the other Herb

Kohl-bashers. One, Herb Kohl bought the Milwaukee Bucks and pledged to keep them in Milwaukee. Don Nelson has run off to La La Land (California) to join another expatriate, the Bucks' former owner, in a rival organization. I put the question: Who stood up for the future of pro basketball in Wisconsin, Nelson or Kohl?

Two, as the new owner of the Bucks, Kohl wanted some say in the business end of the operation, including player personnel transactions. Since Kohl just shelled out millions to buy the team, that seems a reasonable position to take. In light of Nelson's recent draft picks, this stance seems not only wise but imperative. Three, it is true that unlike other sports teams in Wisconsin, Nelson consistently brought us a winning program. For this we should be grateful. However, it is also true that he never won the big one - the NBA championship. I appreciate what Don Nelson has done for basketball and the farmer in Wisconsin. Nelson, however, had his strengths and weaknesses. Herb Kohl also has made made many civic contributions. Let's give him a chance in the sports arena. - Dennis McGilligan, Madison

Little League defended

Your article in the July 11 Wisconsin State Journal sports page "You make the call, kids" by Pral Arnold, appearing next to "Atta "ks, abuse follow umpires in Little League," by Sid Kirchheimer of the Fort Lauderdale News and Sun Sentinel, picked up off a news wire, really paints a tainted picture of what is really happening with the Little League program today. I don't dispute that these things happen, and the events mentioned in the news wire article are certainly tragic. I do however take issue with what is being portrayed with our Madison program, by the two articles appearing as they did. Little League today teaches boys a great deal not only about the great game of baseball but also about life itself. As a father, an assistant coach and head coach for the past four years, I've made a commitment to my two sons and my ball players to teach them the game. In my four years with the West Madison Little League, I have yet to see anything as you try to portray. Our league will not tolerate any harassment of umpires by managers, coaches, players or fans. As a coach, I will not permit my players to even question a call made by an umpire. Our umpires are 14 and 15 years old. They're making judgment calls and most boys do a very good job. We as adults, coaches, fathers, mothers and fans must realize that we are dealing with boys in a highly emotional game and it is our responsibility to teach them the game so they love it as much as we do, not turn from it.

In a time when we read daily about so many negative issues, why must two of this country's greatest joys, our youth and the great game of baseball also be tainted.

I challenge Paul Arnold and the Wisconsin State Journal to really do their homework and really learn what our program is all about and has done for boys over the years, especially on this year being the 40th anniversary of Little League. "Better than any other sport activity, baseball expresses the heart and character of the nation. To those who play it and take satisfaction from it baseball truly mirrors an American way of items of umpiring. Two major points were passed up in the good articles presented: 1. No game may be played without an umpire (or referee, or judge). 2. If the umpire (or referee) is wrong, they are still right; the contest cannot continue without this understanding. The contest can continue under protest, but it is a league matter. Billy Martin, past manager of New York, Oakland, Texas, etc., is probably an expert on this second

Davies makes short work of long Women's Open

By Mark Johnson

©Dallas Morning News

PLAINFIELD, N.J. - Laura Davies stood on the 17th fairway at Plainfield Country Club early Tuesday afternoon and turned to Tony, her older brother and caddie. "What do you think?" she asked.

"You've attacked all week," Tony said. "Why hold back now?"

She had 237 yards to the front of the green, with two large bunkers to carry. She merely needed to preserve her two-stroke lead in Tuesday's 18-hole playoff to capture the 42nd U.S. Women's Open. Davies never gave it a second thought.

Using a three-wood, she reached the front fringe on the 493-yard hole, got down in three putts and settled for

With another par at 18, the Englishwoman finished off JoAnne

Carner of the United States and Ayako Okamoto of Japan to become the fourth foreign Women's Open champion, joining Australia's Jan Stephenson (1983), France's Catherine Lacoste (1967) and Uruguay's Fay Crocker (1955).

"I think I'm the happiest person in the world at the moment," said Davies, 23, who earned $55,000 in only her fourth American event. "It will take all of the flight home to let it sink in. I just don't know what it means to me yet. It's just incredible, to go out there against who I consider two of the best golfers in the world, and actually beat them."

If Davies was surprised, Carner certainly was not.

"It's like when (Nancy) Lopez turned pro and won everything." Carner said. "She was an exceptional person, and I think Laura Davies is, too. I think one of the great players is

Playoff card: Par for the course

Laura Davies needed only to play par golf to win the 18-hole playoff for the U.S. Women's Open championships. Below are the cards for Davies, Ayako Okamoto and JoAnne Carner for Tuesday's round at the 6,284-yard, par-72 Plainfield Country Club.

On Monday, Davies was content to avoid losing the tournament. Okamoto, 36, led by three strokes with 10 holes remaining in regulation. Carn-

> On Tuesday, it was Davies' turn. Davies took the lead for keeps at the 11th hole and finished with a 1-under-par 71, two strokes ahead of

All three completed 72 holes at 3-under-par 285 Monday to further extend a tournament delayed twice by rain and lightning.

"She plays good, smart golf," Carner said of Davies, who was the leading money-winner on the European women's tour the past two years. "But I think the thing I like about her most is (that) she just stands up there and hits it . . . If she had an opportunity to go for a par-5 (in two shots), she just let it rip."

Davies, however, used her driver only five times Tuesday. Her most valuable weapon was her putter, which delivered three birdies Tuesday in addition to nerve-wracking pars of four, three and six feet on the first three holes. Give an assist to brother Tony, 26, who read all her Okamoto and Carner, who each earned $23,824, had their chances.

Carner missed an eight-foot birdie putt at 15 and a three-footer at 18. Okamoto, trailing by two with two holes remaining, lipped out birdie tries of 18 feet on the 17th hole and 12 feet on the 18th.

Pars on the last three holes sealed the victory for Davies, who was scheduled to fly home to England on Tuesday night and defend her British Women's Open title in Cornwall. She's the first woman to win both the U.S. and British championships.

"Really, I was just trying to keep it in play all week," Davies said. "It was my putting - my short putting, Davies pitched from short rough at really. I've never holed out so well."

George will transfer to Illinois

Associated Press

Jeff George, considered the nation's best high school quarterback in 1985, announced Tuesday he will transfer from Purdue to Illinois this fall, though he can't play for the Illini before 1988.

Under National Collegiate Athletic Association rules, he won't be eligible to play for the Illini for another year. George, who earlier had plans to transfer to the University of Miami, said he decided on Illinois because he had "many second thoughts about leaving the Big 10."

George, who in 1986 completed 122 of 226 passes in the passing offense of Purdue coach Leon Burtnett, announced at the end of his freshman season he would leave the Boilermakers. Fred Akers, whose offense is run-oriented, had been named to replace Burtnett.

■ University of Texas officials have decided to declare defensive back James Lott ineligible for his senior season for accepting money from New York sports agents Lloyd Bloom and Norby Walters, The Atlanta Journal reported Tuesday. The university issued a statement, however, which sports information director Bill Little called a denial of the report.

Kenosha girl fights wrestling rule

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A 13-year-old Kenosha girl has filed suit in U.S. District Court in an effort to become a full-fledged member of a wrestling team at McKinley Junior High School there.

The suit filed Monday by Billie Jo Mann and her mother, Mary Sin-kler, contended that a Kenosha Unified School District No. 1 rule against girls being on the boys' wrestling team is unconstitutional.

The class action suit seeks a court order that she be allowed to compete on the boys' team or that a girls' wrestling team be created. Mann was allowed to be a member of the team last season, but she practiced with a female teacher and was not allowed to practice with

Angels sign ex-Red Sox Buckner

Bill Buckner was penciled into the starting lineup of the California Angels Tuesday night, just a few hours after signing with the American League club.

"I probably could have signed with five different clubs." the 37-year-old veteran said before the Angels' game in Oakland against the Athletics. "It was nice for my ego.'

Others believed to have expressed interest were Texas, Minnesota and Oakland.

Buckner, released by the Boston Red Sox last Thursday, said his contract with California goes through the 1988 season.

Buckner was listed as the Angels' starting first baseman Tuesday night. Regular first baseman Wally Joyner has been out of the lineup with bruised ribs.

Packers headed the wrong way

Remember just one year ago when coach Forrest Gregg decided it was time for the Green Bay Packers to begin a youth movement?

Gregg, distraught after the Packers strung together back-to-back-toback 8-8 seasons, cleaned house of all the team's aged veterans such as quarterback Lynn Dickey.

Brad

Capital Times Staff Writer

Falduto

Apparently, the move was successful. After all, the Packers got out of their 8-8 rut and proceeded to put together a 4-12

Well, what a difference a year can make. As the Packers embark on training camp today, Gregg is talking about signing 37-year-old quarterback Ron Jaworski, who recently was dumped by the Philadelphia Eagles.

Some youth movement, eh?

Granted, with starting quarterback Randy Wright holding out in a contract dispute, Gregg is just looking for bargaining leverage — and a little insurance policy — in talking about signing Jaworski.

But viewed another way, the talk about Jaworski just illustrates how precariously the green and gold are treading through the rough National Football League waters without a rudder — and how a coach with just two years left on his five-year contract is starting to panic.

Think about it.

If someone asked you to describe what type of a team the Packers are, what kind of answer would you come up with?

You could say for the most part, they are young. Better phrased, you could say they are inexperienced. You could say they don't have much of a running attack.

You could say they don't have much of a passing attack.

You could say they don't have a legitimate NFL wide receiver, not with bad-boy James Lofton farmed out.

You could say they have a porous offensive line. You could say they have a weak defensive line.

You could say they don't have a punter.

You could say one of their top defensive backs will be doing time, not getting playing time, this season. What you can't say is they are a team headed in the right direction.

Of course, any youth movement takes time, especially one in the NFL where it takes 45 men to win a game, not 12 as in pro basketball or 24 as in major league baseball.

But as Gregg heads into his fourth season at the helm of the Packers, it might be time to start asking how much more time should he be given for the team to show signs things are turning around.

Since Gregg has been in Green Bay, other teams have hit bottom and bounced up again. The Minnesota Vikings are a good example. They may not be a great team, but you can bet they'll win a few games and will be fun to watch this season.

What isn't fun is watching a .500 team clean house only to talk about bringing in an over-the-hill quarterback.

By MARK METZLER Special to The Capital Times

Dick Weber will be going for his 30th PBA title tonight in the $140,000 Kessler Open in Green Bay, while Marc McDowell will be going for PBA title number one.

McDowell and Weber hung on to fifth place in the event despite a shaky match play record of 8-10. They will bowl in the first match of the night against fourth-seeded Dennis Jacques, Merritt Island, Fla., and senior player Chet Dziedzina, Chi-

"The crowd is just crazy here," McDowell said in a telephone interview. "We walked out to start our block tonight (Tuesday) and the people started chanting. With Dick Weber as your partner and me being from Wisconsin . . . it was just wild."

Weber and McDowell have a 36game pinfall total of 16,032. Rowdy Morrow, St. Louis, and senior pro-Mickey Spiezio, Crest Hill, Ill., lead the event with a total of 16,531.

McDowell said he hopes to get on a roll like he did in the Tuscon Open a couple of weeks ago when he went from the fifth position in the finals to the championship game.

"We're glad to be there and we're just going to go out and have some fun. But if we get by the first game, then watch out," McDowell said, "Maybe I'll get number one and he'll get number 30.1

"You really can't play forever. You hope you can play forever. At this point I feel I can play for another three years and be productive. But the hardest thing for me is to say 'I know I can play, I want to play, but I'm going to stop.'

Kenosha girl fights to wrestle

Kenosha Superintendent of Schools John Hosmanek says he supports a decision prohibiting a 13-year-old girl from wrestling on her junior high school's team, despite a federal court action seeking to overturn the decision.

Former Kenosha Unified Schools Athletic Director Glen McCulloch made the decision earlier this year not to allow Billy Jo Mann to practice or wrestle after consulting with the five junior high school principals in Keno-

However, a suit was filed this week in U.S. District Court requesting that the girl be allowed to participate on the boys' wrestling team or that the school, as an alternative, start a team for girls.

Whatever the outcome of that suit, Hosmanek said Tuesday he stands buy the school district's original decision. "The whole thing is matter of principle for me," Mann said of the suit.

Hill Farms team wins city diving meet

First-place finishes by Jessica Anderson-Norman, Ann Sexton and Dan Morgan gave Hill Farms diving team the title in the All-City Diving Meet Tuesday at Ridgewood Pool.

Anderson-Norman scored 136.98 points to edge Jeannae Petit of Parkcrest in the girls' 10-and-under division. Sexton won the girls' 13-14 division with 201.39 points.

In the boys' division, Morgan compiled 196.38 points to edge teammate Tom Pertzborn, who finished with

Ohio State's Rogan allegedly assaulted minors

Ohio State defensive back Greg Rogan's appearance in Urbana (Ohio) Municipal Court next week stems from assault and criminal damaging charges resulting from an alleged incident involving two teen-age girls.

This is the third encounter with local police in less than a year for the 21year-old Rogan, an Ohio State senior and graduate of Urbana High School.

City police issued a summons to Rogan Monday, based on a report filed Saturday by a 17-year-old Urbana girl. She said Rogan hit her in the face, causing her nose to bleed, and kicked and hit her car hard enough to cause dents in it.

Rogan has been unavailable for comment. Ohio State football coach Earle Bruce said he had been unable to contact Rogan and had no comment on the charges.

He will not be funny just because Hayden Fry is funny. And he will not be boring because George Perles is boring, always boring. "When you're talking to your hardcore supporters, every joke is funny and every story is great. But this will be a tougher crowd," Morton pointed out.

No big deal. He has played tough rooms before. And these people will buy everything the Big Ten coaches tell them. Morton, in fact, might want to tell them about the split-back veer option. But he may not want to tell them that his wife has personalized "Veer" license plates on her car. "I told her I wanted to be anonymous," Don Morton said. "If we don't move the ball next fall, she might have some vandalism."

If things get really bad, she can always tell everybody that she is married to Dan Martin.

Texas defensive back declared ineligible

University of Texas officials will declare defensive back James Lott ineligible for his senior season because he signed a contract with sports agents, according to a published report, which was denied by the university.

"The university is investigating the relationship betweeen student athlete James Lott and a sports agent," the school said Tuesday night in response to the copyright report published in The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution.

Lott, an international class track and field athlete, will not be allowed to take part in intercollegiate athletics at Texas if he has signed with agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, as the papers reported, the university said. Sports Information Director Bill Little called the university's statement a denial of the report. The agents admit they have signed athletes, and paid them, before their college eligibility was completed, but say they have broken no laws. A grand jury in Chicago is investigating the agents' dealings with athletes. The papers said Lott will be notified of his loss of eligibility when he returns from a track meet in Yugoslavia next

Northwestern to drop track, cross country

Northwestern University plans to drop its track and cross country programs after the 1987-88 seasons, a newspaper reported today.

The Big Ten Conference school was notifying athletes this week that men's and women's cross country and men's and women's track and field, indoor and outdoor, would be scrapped after this school year, the Chicago Tribune reported in its Tuesday editions.

"When they called, they didn't talk much about the reasons for it, but I think it's a financial decision," said Bob Cull, a Wildcats track team member who finished second in the 800-meter run at the 1987 Big Ten outdoor track and field meet.

The Tribune quoted an unidentified source as saying the final decision came from President Arnold R. Weber's office.

Northwestern men finished eighth in the 1987 Big Ten outdoor meet, and the school's women's track team finished

In April, men's track and cross country coach Mike Muska resigned to take a job at Brown University, raising speculation that he may have learned about plans to drop the sports, the newspaper said.

Cordero becomes fourth to win 6,000 races

Angel Cordero Jr. captured a place in horse racing history with his 6,000th victory, but the jockey said he was more relieved than excited.

"I'm finally glad it's over with. It's taken a long time," Cordero said Tuesday after riding Lost Kitty to a nose victory in a three-way stretch duel at Monmouth Park in Oceanport, N.J.

Cordero, 44, joins Bill Shoemaker, Johnny Longden and Laffit Pincay Jr. as the only jockeys to win 6,000 races. Shoemaker, who is still riding, leads the all-time list ith nearly 8,700 victories. Cordero's victory in the ninth race was his second of the day, both coming in divisions of the $40,000-added Colleen Stakes for 2-year-old fillies. In the seventh race, he rode favorite Blue Jean Baby to an eight-length victory. But before Tuesday, he had ridden
