

MORNING BRIEFING

Breweries battle; Miller Open dies

A sponsorship conflict between Miller Brewing Co. and Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. has caused the Professional Bowlers Association to cancel its annual winter tournament in Milwaukee.

Miller Lite was the main sponsor of the ABC telecasts of the winter tour for years, but dropped sponsorship last season to commit more advertising to the Olympics and other events, Miller officials said. Miller's headquarters is in Milwaukee.

When Anheuser-Busch of St. Louis picked up television sponsorship of the tour, its contract with ABC stated that tournaments carrying the name of competitors could not be identified by the competitors' name.

Thus, the network referred to the Miller Lite Championships last season as the Milwaukee Open.

Commissioner Joe Antonora said the PBA is committed to Milwaukee and probably will host a tourney again, but it will not be on the peak winter tour.

The Madison Bowling Association's 17th annual Hall of Fame dinner will be Aug. 17 at the Holiday Inn Southeast. Tickets are $15 and are available by calling 221-9590.

Jailed Pointer tries to hang self

A former UW-Stevens Point football player tried to hang himself in a jail cell early Friday, Portage County Sheriff's Department deputies said.

Keith Majors was taken by ambulance to St. Michael's Hospital, where he remained for evaluation. The hospital would not release any information on Majors.

Majors, one of two players involved in an eligibility scandal that cost the Pointers its National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics co-national championship last season, was arrested three weeks ago on charges of issuing worthless checks, using someone else's credit card and probation violations. He has remained in jail in lieu of a $5,000 bond.

Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder

Snyder: I said what I read

Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder said he was wrong for making his comments about blacks being bred for athletics and that the only place for whites in sports would be coaching.

"I was wrong for saying it. I wish I hadn't said it, but I read it," he said during an interview on Cable News Network's "Larry King Live" in Atlanta. "It was in seven different books, it was in 'Sports Illustrated' magazine."

Snyder was fired from his job as a commentator for CBS after the remarks were aired by a New York television station in January. He had been with the network for 12 years.

"This thing has been talked about for years, but nobody had guts enough to say it," Snyder said. "I guess I did."

Molinas wins title on a disputed KO

Tomas Molinas of Colombia landed a wild roundhouse punch seconds after the bell sounded ending the sixth round, knocking out Marlon Starling to win the World Boxing Association welterweight title in Atlantic City, N.J.

The punch seemed to catch Starling somewhat off guard and he quickly fell to the canvas as referee Joe Cortez began to count, while many at ringside questioned whether the punch had landed in time. After about 3 minutes, it was announced that Cortez ruled the punch landed before the bell sounded.

An earlier title fight on the card also ended in controversy. Lloyd Honeyghan retained his World Boxing Council welterweight title when challenger Youngkil Chung was unable to continue after being hit by a low blow in the fifth round.

3 Florida players say they were paid

Three former University of Florida basketball players said this week that they were given money by team coaches, a possible violation of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

Andrew Moten, Anthony Williams and another player who requested anonymity said they were given cash by either associate head coach Monte Towe or assistant coach Kenny McCraney.

ODDS & ENDS

The Andy North Golf Invitational, a benefit for the Wisconsin Special Olympics, is Monday at Maple Bluff Country Club. A celebrity long-driving contest begins at 9:15 a.m., followed by golf at 11:30 a.m. Among the sports personalities expected to attend: former Green Bay Packer quarterback Lynn Dickey, hockey great Gordie Howe and basketball great Rick Barry. . . . The Madison Aquatic Club and the Badger Dolphins Swim Club sent a total of 19 swimmers to the U.S. Junior National Championships, which begin today in Tempe, Ariz. . . . An all-star team composed of players from the Madison United and Madison 56er soccer clubs will play an all-star team from Bavaria tonight at 7 at Breese Stevens Field. . . . First-round draft pick Will Perdue of Vanderbilt has agreed to a five-year, $2.5 million dollar contract with the Chicago Bulls. . . . Former DePaul guard Kevin Edwards, a first-round choice of Miami, became the first player to sign a contract with the Heat. . . . The Lady Westchester Open, scheduled for Aug. 11-14 in White Plains, N.Y., has been canceled because it has been unable to secure corporate sponsorship, the Ladies Professional Golf Association said. . . . New Mexico State University basketball player Steve McGlothlin traded in a 1988 Nissan Sentra in order to retain his last year of eligibility. McGlothlin won the car by making a halfcourt shot at halftime of a World Basketball League game July 13. . . . America's Cup organizers and the New Zealand challenger agreed to race in September 7, 9 and 11 to avoid competition with the Summer Olympics for media coverage and audiences.

Carreker hurts knee; doubtful for opener

By Tom Oates
Sports reporter

GREEN BAY — Defensive end Alphonso Carreker, a starter for the last three years, will probably miss the Green Bay Packers' season opener because of a knee injury.

Carreker, 26, sustained a partially torn ligament in his right knee at Friday morning's practice and had to be carried off the field. He will have an arthroscopic procedure done either today or Monday to check for cartilage damage.

Packer trainer Dominic Gentile said surgery won't be needed, but that Carreker would be in a walking cast from four to five weeks. The Packers open the National Football League season against the Los Angeles Rams on Sept. 4.

Defensive line coach Greg Blache said it would take some time for Carreker to get ready to play once the cast is removed. Asked whether he expected Carreker to be ready for the opener, Blache said, "Probably not."

Carreker, who was playing with a slight hip injury he sustained in Wednesday's practice, said he wants to play in the opener.

"This is a streak of bad luck," he said. "But I've got to deal with it and come back strong. It's nothing that will hamper me for the rest of the season."

Carreker, the Packers' first-round draft pick in 1984, has been a starter since his second season. He has never become the pass-rusher the Packers envisioned when they drafted him, but he has been a steady performer against the run.

Like other veterans, the 6-foot-6, 270-pound Carreker opened camp as the starter at his position even though there is a new coaching staff.

"I thought he was a good football player and I didn't see any reason why he couldn't or shouldn't be the starter there," Blache said. "With his experience and the way he has played, the guys behind him were going to have to go some to catch him."

Veteran Ben Thomas, free agent Blaise Winter and rookie Nate Hill, the Packers' sixth-round pick, have been playing behind Carreker in practice.

■ Today's scrimmage at 2 p.m.: The Packers' first full-scale scrimmage of the season will start an hour earlier than originally announced, at 2 p.m. today instead of 3 p.m.

The scrimmage, which is free and open to the public, will be played at Lambeau Field unless it rains this morning. Packer coach Lindy Infante said he would not risk tearing up the field if it rains.

If it rains, the scrimmage will be at the team's Oneida Street practice field across from the stadium.

The four healthy quarterbacks in camp — Marc Wilson, Randy Wright, Blair Kiel and Bud Keyes — will play in the scrimmage, but in no particular order, Infante said.

■ They're thin at right tackle: Because of injuries and holdouts, right tackle has become a bit of a problem area for the Packer offensive line.

Keith Uecker, last year's starter, has been moved to right guard because of Ron Hallstrom's holdout. Alan Veinograd, who spelled Uecker on passing downs last season, aggravated the buritis in his hip a week ago and hasn't practiced since. Steve Collier, the huge strike-replacement player, hasn't practiced in two days because of turf toe.

To fill the gap, the Packers moved second-year man Dave Croston to tackle. The much-improved Croston, who spent all of last season on injured reserve, opened camp at left guard.

Jespersion, Dupuis set the pace for swimmers

By Kerby Meyers
Sports reporter

Michelle Jespersen didn't have to look any further than her own pool's history books to find someone to emulate in this year's Madison All-City Swim Meet.

Ann Drolsom, who set four records for Hillfarm Swim Club from 1979 to 1981 and later swam for Madison West High School and the University of Texas, is Jespersen's inspiration.

"She has become my idol," Jespersen, 13, said shortly after qualifying for the 100-meter individual medley in the 13-14 age group on Friday afternoon at Ridgewood Pool.

"She swam in Yugoslavia in an international competition and she tried out for the Olympics — she was a great swimmer."

Jespersion didn't do badly, either. She was the top qualifier for today's medley final in 1 minute, 10.10 seconds, just 2 seconds off Drolsom's seven-year-old record.

John Penner, one of the Hillfarm coaches, said Drolsom's inspiration spurs Jespersen when the competition doesn't.

"While the girl next to her was a fine swimmer, she just couldn't push Michelle," Penner said. "That's when the goals she has set help, because she loves to compete, and she'll try and achieve those."

Jenny Bryant of Ridgewood was the second-best qualifier in 1:11.63, but she couldn't make up for Jespersen's strength in the butterfly in the first lap.

"I like to get out to a strong start with my butterfly, since that is my strongest stroke," said Jespersen, who will be an eighth grader at Van Hise Junior High School this fall. "And I've been working on my backstroke and breaststroke to maintain the lead."

Last year, Jespersen set a meet record in the butterfly in the 11-12 age group. She would like to set the 13-14 record this year, and qualified for today's final in :31.04, less than a second off Kerby Seeliger's year-old mark.

Other top girls' swimmers on Friday included Hillfarm's Lindsey Dold, who qualified in the 50 freestyle and backstroke in the 11-12 age group, and Shorewood's Melissa Fuss, who recorded the best time in the 100 individual medley and the 50 butterfly in the 15-17 age group.

In the boys' competition, Middleton's Matthew Dupuis set two meet records in the 11-12 age group.

Dupuis' time of :29.74 in the 50 butterfly shattered his own mark by almost 1½ seconds. He also swam the 50 freestyle in :27.39, bettering Dan Urben's year-old mark of :27.74.

Dupuis, who turns 13 on Monday, was by far the largest swimmer in his age group, but said his size may hinder his performance in the next age group.

"My size had some effect on today's race because I am bigger and stronger than the guys I was competing against," Dupuis said. "But I'm afraid it will be bad for my endurance."

Bob Joers, one of Middleton's coaches, minced no words about the importance of Dupuis' size.

"He's just a huge guy for his age," Joers said. "But he also has a great attitude — coming in early to practice with the older members of the team."

Other top boys' swimmers were Nick Gansner of Shorewood, who qualified for today's finals in the 100 individual medley and the 100 breaststroke in the 13-14 age group, and Nakoma's Ian Hayden, who was the top qualifier in the 100 individual medley and the 100 butterfly in the 15-17 age group.

Page goes home to join Hall of Fame

State Journal wire services

Twenty-five years ago Alan Page got a summer construction job in his hometown of Canton, Ohio to help build the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Today, Page will be enshrined in that Hall.

"It was just another dirty job on a hot day," Page said, remembering that summer when he was a high school football player looking to make some money.

Page will enter the Hall as a part of a class that includes Mike Ditka, Jack Ham and Fred Biletnikoff. He is the first Canton native to be enshrined there.

"I don't know if things have changed a great deal (in Canton)," said Page, who played defensive tackle for the Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears. "Obviously, it's great to go home."

The four inductees represent some of the greatest teams of the last 25 years. And they also represent the best of the Rust Belt.

Three came out of western Pennsylvania — Biletnikoff from Erie, Ham from Johnstown and Ditka from Carnegie. Canton is just across the Ohio border.

"Isn't that something that we all came from within 90 to 100 miles of Canton?" Page said. "That's something unique. That says something about the quality of football that is played in the area."

Ham said: "Western Pennsylvania and Ohio have always been known for great football players. It's a nice coincidence that were going in together."

Biletnikoff agreed. "Sometimes people don't see where all the great players come from," he said. "This is just a coincidence but it says something."

Catholic High School to Notre Dame. He was drafted by the Vikings in 1967 and played in Minnesota until midway through the 1978 season.

Page was selected the National Football League's most valuable player in 1971, the first defensive player ever to receive that honor. Four other times he was named the conference defensive player of the year. He spent the final 3½ years of his 15 seasons with the Bears.

Ham played on three Super Bowl championship teams during his 12-year career at Pittsburgh. Ham, a graduate of Penn State, made all-Pro for seven consecutive seasons. He had 25½ sacks, 21 fumble recoveries and 32 interceptions in his career.

Ditka, who punished the opposition as a blocker, caught 427 passes for 43 touchdowns during his 12 seasons. Ditka, who also played with the Eagles and the Cowboys, coached the Bears to a Super Bowl championship in 1986.

"I wasn't trying to make any friends out there," said Ditka, who will be introduced today by former teammate Ed O'Bradovich.

"I just played hard. I never cared what the other players said; that never bothered me. I have no apologies for the way I played football."

Biletnikoff began his career with the Oakland Raiders as a special teams player. But seven games into his first season in 1965, he caught seven passes for 118 yards and missed only eight games over the next 13 seasons.

Biletnikoff caught 589 passes for 76 touchdowns and played in three NFL title games, five AFC championships and Super Bowls II and XI. He was named the MVP in Super Bowl XI with four receptions for 79 yards.

Saints will face a test in today's scrimmage

State Journal wire services

It'll be showtime for rookies and free agents when the New Orleans Saints have an intrasquad scrimmage this afternoon at the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse.

The scrimmage will be more an evaluation process for the younger players," coach Jim Mora said. "I think we know what the older players can and cannot do."

The Saints signed their last hold-out, wide receiver Mel Gray, to a two-year contract on Friday.

■ Brother, this can be tough: Saints' nose tackle John Mandarich said his younger brother, Michigan State offensive tackle Tony Mandarich, got rougher treatment from the National Collegiate Athletic Association than others who committed greater offenses against amateurism.

Tony Mandarich, considered by many as the top-rated collegiate lineman, was stripped of his last year of eligibility after applying for the National Football League's supplemental draft. He later changed his mind and withdrew from the draft.

"When I wrote the letter for him to enter the draft — we didn't get an agent or anything, because we wanted to keep it clean — we didn't know that just applying for the draft would make him ineligible," said John Mandarich, who is Tony's guardian.

"Last year, a couple of kids actually took money from agents, then gave it back and got their eligibility reinstated."

Meanwhile, George Carter, the brother of Philadelphia Eagles' wide receiver Cris Carter, said he did not push his brother into signing with agents, an action that led to Cris' dismissal from the Ohio State team.

George Carter denied getting any money from agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom for helping to sign Cris. Another brother, Butch Carter, has said George was partly responsible for Cris' being declared ineligible.

■ Patriots' sale far from done: Negotiations began Friday in New York between the attorney for Victor Kiam, the latest prospective buyer for the New England Patriots, and Philadelphia businessman Fran Murray, who has the exclusive option to buy the team, plus a temporary restraining order preventing a sale to any other party.

The Kiam offer does not include bankrupt Sullivan Stadium in Foxboro, Mass., where the Patriots play, but Kiam has said the team will stay in New England.

A source familiar with the talks said the restraining order could be lifted "when you pay (Murray) $5 million."

Charles Haley of the San Francisco 49ers signs a football for Kelly Morgan of London during break in preparations for Sunday's game with the Miami Dolphins in London's Wembley Stadium.

Riley is perfect stop for bicyclists

RILEY — Riding a bicycle to the tiny rural village of Riley can be a metaphor for life.
 There are many routes to take, there are some ups and downs along the way, but everyone must find the road that's right for them.
 Aside from Paoli, Riley might be the most popular cycling destination in the Madison area. The reasons are many, beginning with the Military Ridge State Trail, which passes through the town, and ending with the Riley Tavern, an oasis for thirsty cyclists.

Footloose

By Mike Ivey
 Capital Times Staff Writer

Otherwise, there isn't a whole lot going on in Riley. But that's part of its charm. It's hard to believe this peaceful crossroads is a mere seven miles west of the Madison city limits.

It wasn't always that way. Around the turn of the century, six passenger trains a day stopped in Riley. The town boasted a creamery, stockyards, church and about 100 residents. The tavern building housed a general store and post office.
 Today, life in Riley centers around the tavern. The traditional bluegrass jams are still held the first Saturday of each month, although the tavern has changed owners. June Burns bought the bar last December after the death of longtime owner Vale Beard.
 "It's my home away from home," said Burns, 50, who lives four miles away in Mount Horeb.
 Burns said hundreds of cyclists pass by on weekends, some stopping in at the tavern to get water and use the restrooms, others to have a cold drink.
 While cyclists sometimes have the reputation for empty water bottles and pockets to match, Burns is more than happy to just have cyclists stop in and say hello, even if they don't belly up to the bar.
 "They're a neat group of people," she said. "When I bought the place I thought it was just a little farm bar. But we've got everybody. It's a friendly place."
 True. The folks sitting in the tavern have seen enough cyclists they aren't startled by the clicking of cleated cycling shoes or the sight of Lycra shorts.
 Trail passes are available in the Riley Tavern and Burns sells more than anyone else along the Military Ridge Trail, according to Gary Pittz of the Department of Natural Resources.
 Burns receives a small commission from the state for her trouble, but she returns it to the trail. Call it good business sense.
 Trail passes for residents are $1.50 per day or $5 for a season. Non residents pay $2 or $7.
HEAVY SWEATING — The local running circuit usually slows down this time of year. Wisconsin summers, with high heat and humidity don't often make for the best running conditions.
REGISTERED REPS. DON'T MISS EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES UNDER $30 IN CLASSIFIED THIS WEEK.

However the Waunakee Waunafest run has become a mid-summer classic on the local running scene. Today's race marks the 10th anniversary of the run and race director Ted Tweed has been there since the beginning.
 "We put a little reminder on the shirt, but it will be a low-key 10th anniversary," Tweed said.
 Although the number of entries is down from a peak of 800 several years ago, the run still attracts a big turnout. In the past the race has attracted everyone from Olympian Cindy Bremser to ex-Governor Tony Earl.
 Tweed expected about 400 runners for the race, which began at 8 a.m. at the Village Park in Waunakee on the east end of Main Street.
 The race is held in conjunction with Waunafest, a folkfest and community festival in the German tradition. That sometimes translates into lots of beer after the race.
CENTURY RIDE — Jefferson County isn't know as a bicycling hotspot, but the Tour de Fort Bicycle and Ski Club is trying to change that.
 The club is sponsoring a Century (100-mile) Ride Saturday, Aug. 6. The second-annual event will focus on the fun of touring rather than racing and is held in conjunction with the Fort Fest community celebration.
 The 100-mile ride with a 50-mile option is designed in a figure 8 layout, with the start and finish at the center of the loop. The course winds through the county roads of Jefferson County and includes a stretch on the new Glacial Drumlins State Trail with a chance for a swim in Rock Lake.
 The ride begins with a mass start at 7:30 a.m. at Ralph Park in Fort Atkinson on Wisconsin 26 near the north city limits. Day of race registration begins at 6:30 a.m. For a $10 fee you get sag wagons and rest stops with food provided throughout the course.

Calm follows the storm

Infante's style eases pressure on a team once ruled by fear

By Tom Oates
 Sports reporter

GREEN BAY — As Perry Kemp recalls, it was the maddest he has ever seen Lindy Infante.

At the time, Kemp was a wide receiver for the Jacksonville Bulls of the United States Football League and Infante was the coach.

After one particularly futile practice, the mild-mannered Infante blew his stack, sending the players to an immediate and early shower.

Stunned, they never moved. Instead, they begged Infante to continue practice. What followed was one of the Bulls' best practices of the season.

"He's got a lot of character and, if you're there for him, he won't give up on you," said Kemp, a free agent trying to make the Green Bay Packers' roster.

Infante's first training camp as Packer coach lends credence to Kemp's story.

Patience is a virtue with which Infante is blessed. Consequently, there is a marked difference in atmosphere and style between Infante's camp and that run by his predecessor, Forrest Gregg.

If Gregg ran a military boot camp, then Infante runs a boarding school.

If Gregg believed that daily hitting tested the players' manhood, then Infante believes that daily instruction expands their minds.

If Gregg insisted on yelling every time a player made a mistake, then Infante insists on constant positive feedback.

Packer players won't condemn Gregg's heavy-handed methods, but the absence of tension in the air this summer indicates they don't miss them, either.

"Coach Gregg was a lot more conditioning and a lot more hitting," tight end Ed West said. "Coach Infante is more learning and getting down the right techniques.

He's more of a teacher, a laid-back guy. But he doesn't like to tell you something over and over again. When it comes to a point where he feels like a player doesn't want to learn, he (gets mad)."

It doesn't happen often. Infante has displayed nothing but patience while installing his new offense. He has been more than accommodating to his players, even those like Brent Fullwood and Frankie Neal who appear to be allergic to the playbook and frequently line up in the wrong place in practice.

Unlike most National Football League coaches, Infante's favorite practice-field expression can be printed in a family newspaper.

Instead of raising his voice and lowering his vocabulary when a player makes a mistake, Infante says simply, "This is not rocket science, guys."

On the other hand, Gregg's practice-field tirades are legendary. He reportedly saved his best material for the film sessions.

"That's one thing coach Infante has told us: He's not going to get out there and embarrass a guy and call him names and stop practice to yell at people," West said. "He doesn't believe in it. I think the players feel more relaxed when there's not a coach out there hollering and cussing at them."

Infante has raised his voice on occasion, but it lacks Gregg's sarcasm. Infante's outbursts are usually directed at the team rather than an individual player.

"Lindy's not really a yeller," quarterback Randy Wright said. "He'll let you know he's not pleased, but he's not ranting and raving as a rule. So when he does that, it makes you think he means it."

Gregg demanded concentration on the practice field by threatening a player with his job, but eventually, the Lindy Infante differs in many ways from Forrest Gregg, his predecessor as coach of the Green Bay Packers. Infante's camp stresses learning; Gregg's camps were frequently a test of manhood.

Brewers continue to falter

BOSTON (AP) — Given the opportunity to pick up ground on their Eastern trip, the Milwaukee Brewers instead are a team sinking in quicksand. And sinking quickly.

Boston second baseman Marty Barrett atoned for an eighth-inning baserunning mistake in the ninth with a one-out, bases-loaded single, lifting Roger Clemens and the Red Sox to a 3-2 victory over the Brewers.

The defeat was the Brewers' sixth in seven games on their Eastern trip, and dropped them 10 games behind first-place Detroit in the American League East. The Brewers stayed in fifth place, one-half game ahead of Toronto.

"It's discouraging," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said after his team fell to 52-53. "They gave us a couple of reprieves. We're playing just well enough to stay close and just bad enough to lose, consistently."

The Red Sox appeared set to break a 2-2 tie in the eighth when Barrett singled and moved to second on Todd Benzing's sacrifice.

Mike Greenwell hit a fly to right. Barrett tagged up at second and was able only to reach third as the ball bounced off Rob Deer's glove for a double.

After an intentional walk loaded the bases, Jim Rice sliced a line drive to right. Deer made a diving catch with Barrett halfway down the line from third. Barrett went back to tag up, but was an easy out trying to score.

"I called it wrong," Barrett said. "So many emotions were going through my mind on the field. I just wanted a second chance."

"That's the way this team has been going. It's almost like this team said, 'Okay, Marty, we're going to give you another chance to come through.'"

"And it happened. It's amazing." Barrett, hoping to hit a ball far enough in the air, instead grounded Higuera's first pitch through a drawn-in infield to left for his second game-winning RBI of the season, lifting the Red Sox's record to 16-1 since Joe Morgan replaced John McNamara as manager on June 14.

Clemens (15-5) allowed seven hits, walked one and raised his major league-leading strikeout total to 232.

Clemens had to sweat out 149 pitches in 100-degree weather as he outduelled Teddy Higuera (7-7).

Mike Ditka is trying to tone down his image as the loud, abrasive coach of the Chicago Bears. He insists he's trying to be more easygoing at this year's training camp in Platteville.

Beneath Ditka's gruff exterior, there is a sensitive, caring soul

By Perry Hibner
 Sports reporter

PLATTEVILLE — Mike Ditka is the easiest man in pro football to understand, yet the hardest man in pro football to understand.

Ditka, the coach of the Chicago Bears, is a bundle of contradictions.

He is tough, yet gentle. He has an ego, yet he is humble. He screams, yet he often speaks softly.

Ditka, who wiped a tear from his face when former teammate Ed O'Bradovich presented him for induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday, is a study in contrasts.

"He says a lot of things nobody cares about."
 — Jim McMahon (August 1986)

Ditka, 48, hasn't always endeared himself to his players.

Ditka's sideline outbursts are legendary. Television audiences have seen him rant, rave and scream. He once broke his hand after slamming it through a chalkboard.

He began wearing a tie because he thought it would calm him.

Bear players say they've grown accustomed to Ditka's temper.

Mark Bortz, a Pardeeville native, was a senior at Iowa when he met Ditka at a charity golf outing. Bortz caddied. Even on the golf course, Ditka played to win.

"He was intense, really intense," said Bortz, who starts at left guard.

Ditka has had his share of squabbles with his players.

Two years ago during training camp, Ditka criticized McMahon for being overweight and out of shape.

Last season, linebacker Otis Wilson and Super Bowl XX MVP Richard Dent feuded with Ditka.

Wilson criticized his coach after he was benched following an injury. They had a closed-door meeting to air their grievances.

Dent, a defensive end, didn't take kindly when Ditka tried to motivate him by calling him "Robert."

"Ditka keeps things stirred up," said linebacker Wilber Marshall, who signed with Washington during the off-season. "He likes to keep the Bears in the spotlight."

If Ditka has a strength, it may be as a motivator.

"He gets us thinking we need that chip on our shoulder to beat everyone else," linebacker Ron Rivera said. "It's us against them."

McMahon grudgingly praises Ditka.

"He's a winner," he said. "I consider myself a winner. We both give whatever we have on the football field."

Ditka's desire sets him apart from others, his staff says.

"He's an extremely hard competitor," defensive coordinator Vince Tobin said. "He wants to win more than anything else."

After struggling to a 3-6 record in 1982, Ditka's rookie season as coach, Chicago has never finished below .500. Ditka has guided the Bears to four consecutive Central Division titles and a Super Bowl victory.

"Mike's a man of real character."

Ridgewood wins 17th straight swim title

Ridgewood Pool's swim team was so dominant in the Madison All-City Swim Meet on Saturday that Weaver didn't have to worry about winning the 200-meter medley relay. His team missed the finals in the 9-10 age group, but Ridgewood won the meet. Results in Scoreboard on 8B; story on 9B.

Dodgers have the last laugh, for now, on the Brock trade

Some questions and comments to ponder while you perspire on the last day of July:

✓ Remember a year ago when Brewer fans couldn't stifle their laughter when they thought of the trade that sent first baseman Greg Brock from Los Angeles to Milwaukee for right-handed pitchers Tim Leary and Tim Crews?

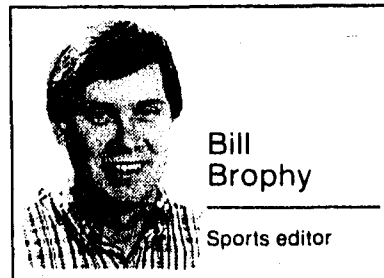

Brock hit .299 and played an integral part in Milwaukee's magical year while Leary had a bad year along with most of the Dodgers and Crews bounced between the minor leagues and Tinseltown.

Who is snickering now? Brock, 31, is hitting .236 with 35 RBI in an injury-plagued year, while Leary is among the National League's top five in earned run average.

Leary, 29, is 10-7 with a 2.37 ERA and has solidified a rotation for the NL West Division leaders. He has 117 strikeouts, which is one fewer than the Brewers' acknowledged star, Teddy Higuera.

Crews, 27, considered a throw-in by most Milwaukee fans, has been the set-up man for the Dodgers' underappreciated bullpen. He had a 2.36 ERA until allowing six runs in 1 1/2 innings on Saturday, making it 3.35.

This is just another example of how a baseball deal shouldn't be judged until a few years have passed, putting it in perspective.

✓ Ever since Proposition 48 entered the college sports vocabulary, one reporter has spent part of each preseason asking each Big Ten football coach how many recruits were not eligible for their freshman year because of failing to meet Prop 48 standards.

The reporter dutifully put his question to each coach last week at the Big Ten's latest mid-summer footballfest in Chicago.

That is, until Badger coach Don Morton spoke. Morton wasn't asked. Why?

Because, the reporter said, "I've always figured Northwestern and Wisconsin never have Prop 48s." That has traditionally been true because those schools ask more academically of their student-athletes.

But for the first time, the UW may have a Prop 48 football player or two.

Morton said he should know by early this week whether Wisconsin will have any Prop 48 casualties.

Two recruits have good enough grades to be accepted into Wisconsin, yet have not scored high enough on their ACT test to qualify by Prop 48 standards. Morton is waiting to find out the latest results of the recruits' entrance test.

If Wisconsin does have a Prop 48 freshman, reporters around the Big Ten may not be the only ones surprised. It figures some members of the UW faculty may also raise their eyebrows.

✓ Looking for a reason why Wisconsin sports fans will spend August and September without a pennant race?

The Brewers' inability to beat the good American League East teams on the road.

Milwaukee went 1-6 at Yankee Stadium this season and is winless in six games at Fenway Park.

To add some perspective to how disappointing the Brewers have been, did you notice this morning that Milwaukee is a game below .500 and California is a game above .500? Is there anyone who thinks the Angels are a good team?

✓ Why is it that college football spends so much money and time on preseason hype for Heisman Trophy candidates?

You never hear baseball or pro football people hyping the candidates for most valuable player before the season.

Swimmers honor distinguished alumni

Jack Young, left, and Tom Senn, both of whom started their careers with local swim clubs, went on to the University of Wisconsin and qualified for this year's U.S. Olympic trials, were honored Saturday morning at the Madison All-City Swim Meet at Ridgewood Pool. Young started with the Ridgewood club and Senn with the Shorewood club. Also honored were Jay Mortenson, a Stanford University standout who has qualified for the Olympic trials, and Annabelle Cripps, a 1984 British Olympian who has qualified for this year's British trials. Both started with the Maple Bluff club.

Hayden doesn't stay in the swim of things

By Kerby Meyers
Sports reporter

So much for inspiration. After a 15-minute ceremony honoring four Madison swimmers who have qualified for this year's Olympic trials, one competitor in the All-City Swim Meet had the nerve to say the Olympics aren't his goal.

"I don't think I'll be in their places. In fact, I just have a goal of reaching the conference championships in college," Ian Hayden said during Saturday's finals at Ridgewood Pool. "I don't think I could ever compete like them."

Regardless, the lack of an Olympic-sized vision didn't hinder Hayden, who swam for the Nakoma club. He easily won the 200-meter individual medley and 100 butterfly in the 15-17 age group.

His time of 2 minutes, 20.04 seconds in the medley was almost 5 seconds better than second-place finisher Chris Olson of Ridgewood. Hayden's time of 1:03.03 in the butterfly was almost 3 seconds ahead of Ridgewood's Jim Drew.

Swimming at home, Ridgewood easily won its 17th consecutive team title with 1,383 points. Hill Farm finished second with 1,074.

Hayden, 18, was allowed to compete in the meet because it is the summer following his senior year at Madison West High School. He will attend the University of Miami (Ohio) on a swim scholarship in the fall.

Although Hayden may not be planning a swimming career beyond college, he is satisfied with an offer to swim beyond high school.

"I've been swimming for 12 years, and competing in college is something I have always looked forward to," Hayden said. "I wouldn't quit before college because that is the competition level I have wanted to achieve."

Where Hayden's visions stop, many of the other athletes in Saturday's competition carry them on.

Hill Farm's Amy Gosling, 15, said

'I wasn't surprised we won today.'
Ridgewood coach
Jeff Jensen

she wants to enter international competition some day.

"My goal for right now is the Junior Nationals next spring in California," Gosling said. "But I'd like to compete in the Olympics, although I know it takes a lot of work."

She beat Shorewood's Melissa Fuss by one-hundredth of a second to win the 100 individual medley, setting a pool record of 1:10.13. Gosling was seeded third in the 100 breaststroke and lost to Ridgewood's Maureen Olson by 0.13 seconds.

"I was still tired from the medley," said Gosling, who also swam on Hill Farm's winning 200 freestyle relay team.

Olson's victory, combined with Rob Verhelst's double victories in the 50 backstroke and butterfly and relay victories for both the boys' and girls' teams, helped Ridgewood win.

"After Thursday and Friday's competition, I wasn't surprised we won today," Ridgewood coach Jeff Jensen said.

Similarly, the swimmers who set meet records on Saturday didn't surprise anyone.

Middleton's Matthew Dupuis, who set a 50 freestyle record on Friday, swam the 50 butterfly in a record :29.22 in the 11-12 age group. He joined Erik Bauch, Mark Morehouse and Jeremy Garski for a 200 medley relay record of 2:18.07.

Michelle Jespersion of Hill Farm swam the 50 butterfly in :30.12, breaking Keri Seeliger's year-old record in the 13-14 age group. Jespersion set the 11-12 mark last year.
