

MORNING BRIEFING

Azinger captures New England title

Paul Azinger won the Professional Golfers' Association New England Classic at Sutton, Mass., by 4 strokes Sunday.

Azinger finished with a 3-under-par 68 and at 16-under for the tournament, 1 shot off the record set in 1985 by George Burns at Pleasant Valley.

Tied for second were Jay Delsing and Bruce Fleisher, the 1991 Classic champion.

Azinger's $180,000 winner's check put him over $1 million in winnings for the year, second overall on the PGA Tour to Nick Price. It was his 10th PGA tournament title and second of the year, the other coming in June at the Memorial Tournament.

He missed only one green and one fairway Sunday.

"I hit it great," he said. "I just stayed aggressive."

George Archer shot a record-tying 8-under-par 63 to force a playoff, then parred the third extra hole to beat Jim Colbert and win the Senior PGA First of America Classic at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Archer, a winner last week in the rain-shortened Ameritech Senior Open, won $82,500 Sunday.

A storm delayed Sunday's final round for 3½ hours, but the rain didn't cool Archer or Chi Chi Rodriguez. Both matched Billy Casper's course record, set in 1987, to finish at 14-under 199. Colbert also was at 199 after a closing 67 at The Highlands.

Rodriguez dropped out on the first extra hole with a bogey.

Rams back Lang has knee surgery

Arthroscopic surgery Sunday revealed torn cartilage and a bone chip in the right knee of Los Angeles Rams running back David Lang.

He had been expected to battle first-round draft pick Jerome Bettis for a starting job on the National Football League team, but he will be sidelined eight to 12 weeks.

Rookie tight end Chris Gedney, the Chicago Bears' third-round draft pick out of Syracuse, will be out eight to 10 weeks with a broken collarbone. He was injured in Saturday's intrasquad scrimmage at Platteville.

He is the second Bears tight end to be sidelined in 10 days. Kelly Blackwell hurt a knee July 16 and is expected to be out two more weeks.

The injuries leave only two healthy tight ends in camp, four-year pro Keith Jennings and rookie free agent Ryan Wetnight.

Ricky Watters, who missed 12 days of training camp, and the San Francisco 49ers agreed on a two-year contract for the Pro Bowl running back. Financial terms weren't disclosed.

The agent for Cleveland Browns defensive lineman Michael Dean Perry, who walked out of camp for one day last week in a dispute with coach Bill Bel-chick, denied his client has asked to be traded.

Cincinnati Bengals general manager Mike Brown said he isn't considering trading holdout wide receiver Reggie Rembert.

Rembert's agent, Gus Sunseri, suggested last week the Bengals consider trading the third-year receiver, who never has been able to hold a starting job.

The Bengals have offered Rembert 10 percent more than his 1992 base salary of $340,000, but Rembert wants a lot more.

New York Jets defensive end Jeff Lageman practiced Saturday in full pads for the first time since he tore a knee ligament last September. "I'm a far cry from all the way back," he said.

New Orleans stated tight end Irv Smith, a first-round draft pick, signed a four-year contract with an option year. Financial terms weren't disclosed.

Gustafsson beats Stich in title match

Sweden's Magnus Gustafsson beat Michael Stich in his home country Sunday, outlasting the German, 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, to win the Mercedes Cup tennis tournament at Stuttgart, Germany.

The world's seventh-ranked player struggled with his serve and against Gustafsson's main weapon, a looping inside-out forehand. Gustafsson's forehand passing shots were the key as the Swede won the last three games to claim his first title since the ### 1992 Swedish Open.

Gustafsson was ranked in the top 10 in the world in 1991 before injuries last year dropped him to his current ranking of 39th.

Eighth-seeded Amos Mansdorf of Israel used a strong baseline game to defeat No. 7 seed Todd Martin, 7-6 (7-4), 7-5, for the championship of the Newsweek Tennis Classic in Washington.

Mansdorf, ranked 29th in his 11th year on the ATP Tour, won $84,000 with his sixth Association of Tennis Professionals title, his first since 1990.

Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Conchita Martinez ended Australia's surprising week on clay in Frankfurt, Germany, to give Spain its second Federation Cup title in three years.

The top-seeded Spanish team dominated the unseeded Australians. Martinez, ranked sixth in the world, routed 91st-ranked Michelle Jaggard-Lai, 6-0, 6-2. Then, Sanchez Vicario, third in the world behind only Steffi Graf and Monica Seles, beat 28th-ranked Nicole Provis, 6-2, 6-3.

ODDS & ENDS

Mexico beat the U.S. men's soccer team, 4-0, Sunday before a capacity crowd of 120,000 at Aztec Stadium in Mexico City to win the Gold Cup championship of the North, Central American and Caribbean Football Federation. Ignacio Ambriz scored Mexico's first goal in the 11th minute with a powerful kick from 30 yards out. The ball whizzed just past the left side of U.S. goalkeeper Tony Meola. Brazil suffered its first-ever loss in World Cup soccer qualifying when Bolivia scored twice in the final 3 minutes for a 2-0 victory at La Paz, Bolivia. Brazil is now 0-1-1, having tied Ecuador, in qualifying for the 1994 World Cup. Arizona State's Stevin Smith scored 16 points to lead the United States over France, 97-60, at Burgos, Spain, in FIBA's first Under-22 World Basketball Championships. The U.S. men improved to 4-0, while France fell to 3-1. Australian Kieren Perkins set his second short-course world swimming record in five days when he swam the 800-meter freestyle in 7 minutes, 34.90 seconds at a meet in Sydney, Australia. He was 4 seconds faster in the 25-meter pool than the 1985 time of German Michael Gross. Perkins broke the 1,500-meter short-course record Wednesday in Canberra. Two hydroplane boats flipped in preliminaries of the Budweiser Cup on the Columbia River at Kennewick, Wash., but neither racer was seriously hurt. Chip Hanauer escaped any such trouble and won with an average speed of 138.165 mph. Japan beat the United States, 15-4, 15-7, 15-8, at Chiba, Japan, in a preliminary round of the World League men's volleyball tournament. The Americans fell to 7-13, while Japan evened its record at 10-10.

Neil Bonnett's car flips over Ted Musgrave's Sunday during the DieHard 500 at Talladega Superspeedway. Bonnett's car sailed into the catch fencing protecting the fans and forced an 80-minute delay for repairs.

Tragedy strikes NASCAR again

Associated Press

Tragedy and triumph often exist side-by-side on the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing Winston Cup circuit.

That was the case again Sunday. Fans came to Talladega (Ala.) Superspeedway to watch the DieHard 500 and to pay homage to the late Davey Allison. They saw an often spectacular race, but one marked by a critical injury to journeyman driver Stanley Smith.

The dramatic doings of the race gave way to more heartache and anguish in the stock car community in the aftermath of the deaths earlier this year of Allison in a helicopter crash and Alan Kulwicki, a Greenfield native, in a plane crash.

"They say racing's a high risk sport, though I don't really think it is," said Dale Earnhardt, who won in a photo finish by 6 inches over Ernie Irvan. "I think it's as safe as anything else."

"Davey didn't die in racing and Stanley Smith crashed doing what he enjoyed doing. Hopefully, he's all OK and going to make it all right. . . . You just do what you can do and get through what you can do, you know, racing or accidents or tragedy. The racing community has pulled together and done a good job getting through what has happened to Davey and Alan."

By the time Earnhardt crossed the finish line on a steamy day, Smith lay in the trauma unit of a Birmingham hospital with a fractured skull sustained during a seven-car crash just before the halfway point in the 188-lap race.

David Smitherman, a spokesman for Caraway Methodist Medical Center, said the 43-year-old driver was in "very critical" condition, with some paralysis on his right side. Doctors were trying to locate the bleeding in his brain.

It was a frustrating and melancholy day for the estimated 100,000 spectators who sat in the 100-degree heat and smothering humidity to watch the race and pay their respects to Allison, who died July 13 after his helicopter crashed the previous day on the Talladega infield.

AUTO RACING

They sat through an 80-minute, red flag delay after the car driven by longtime favorite Neil Bonnett, racing for the first time in more than three years, flew through the air and damaged some fencing, separating the racetrack from the main grandstand. Bonnett came away with only a bruised right arm. The fencing had to be repaired before the race could continue.

When it did resume, with 54 laps remaining, the heated racing also resumed. The green flag was waved on lap 140 and stayed out the rest of the way.

Earnhardt, a five-time Winston Cup champion who leads the 1993 point chase, took the lead from Kyle Petty on lap 185 and barely managed to hold off the charge by Irvan.

Prost wins German Grand Prix: Frenchman Alain Prost won the German Grand Prix in Hockenheim after trailing for most of the race until hard-luck teammate Damon Hill blew a tire on his Williams-Renault with two laps remaining.

Prost completed the full 45 circuits of the 4.2-mile track in 1 hour, 18 minutes, 40.885 seconds.

Jones bests Fangio: P.J. Jones outduelled teammate Juan Fangio II to win the International Motor Sports Association Monterey (Calif.) Camel GT auto race at Laguna Seca Raceway.

Jones powered his Toyota Eagle MKIII into the lead on the 36th lap and held on for his second victory of the year.

Vintage driver dies: David Kuhn, 50, of Lexington, Mass., died Sunday after his sports car ran over a wall and off the side of the race course during a vintage auto race in Pittsburgh.

Thompson off to healthy start

By Kent Youngblood
 Sports reporter

GREEN BAY — A year ago Darrell Thompson came into the Green Bay Packers full-team scrimmage hoping it would be the first small step to a big season.

Instead, he pulled a quadriceps muscle and ended up being out of commission through the first five games of the regular season.

Did he think back to that day before Sunday's intrasquad scrimmage? "A little," he admitted.

Still, he tied for the team lead with 15 rushing yards on just three carries Sunday — including an 11-yard run on the touchdown drive that opened the scrimmage.

But perhaps even more impressive were his two receptions for 30 yards. On one, a 6-yarder from Ken O'Brien on a crossing pattern,

PACKERS NOTES

Thompson pulled in a ball thrown behind him — impressive for a back who has caught just 23 passes in his three-year, 36-game National Football League career.

Thompson, who played at the University of Minnesota, worked out in Minneapolis during the off-season with another former UM player, quarterback Rickey Foggie of the Canadian Football League.

"I catch the ball a lot in the off-season," Thompson said. "I try to work on my routes. It helps."

An offensive review: According to Packers offensive coordinator Sherman Lewis, the Green Bay offense is far ahead of where it was last year at this time.

"Whoa," he said with a laugh. "Way ahead."

And it showed Sunday. Two quarterbacks, Brett Favre and Mark Brunell, hit all of their passes, and the four quarterbacks combined to complete 21 of 30 passes for 181 yards.

"What I remember from last year was (Thompson) getting hurt, losing him," Lewis said. "And we didn't throw all that well. We threw a lot better today than we did last year."

Said Favre: "We're a year into this offense. It feels better. I understand things better. Last year I didn't know what I was doing. It's totally different from last year."

Favre the blocker: The consensus was it wasn't a good move when Favre decided to get out and help block on Thompson's 11-yard run during the scrimmage's first drive.

"I didn't see it," coach Mike Holmgren said. "I'm glad I didn't see it."

Favre's explanation?

"I kind of got back to my old college days," he said. "Even high school. I kind of lost control. I didn't know what I was doing."

Injury update: Potential starters James Campen and guard Rich Moran were held out of the scrimmage. Campen hurt his left shoulder weightlifting Friday, Holmgren said. Moran has what Holmgren called a "shoulder problem."

Hurt in the scrimmage were cornerback Terrell Buckley, who dislocated a little finger; safety Tim Watson, who sprained his left ankle; and cornerback Tracy Smith, who twisted his back. "We came out pretty good," Holmgren said.

First scrimmage pleases Holmgren

makes all the difference in running the team. Our first-unit defense played well."

Detmer wasn't so lucky. He fumbled on his first sack (Noble recovered it) and threw an interception with his first pass (safety LeRoy Butler snared the deflection off Chris Holder's hands). He finished 3-for-7 for 29 yards.

"That wasn't fair," offensive coordinator Sherman Lewis said.

"Because we have a beat-up line (starting center James Campen and left guard Rich Moran) were among the players who sat out the scrimmage. Ty was going with almost a rookie line and they were trying to block Reggie White. Ty did a pretty nice job."

Said Holmgren: "Ken O'Brien did some good things out there. But you kind of expect him to. Some of the younger players get thrown in a difficult situation, going against our first (defense). That's a little bit of a stacked deck. But they hung in there."

Other highlights of the scrimmage? The 30-year-old Noble, who led all defenders with six tackles, made a sack and recovered a fumble. "I thought Noble did very well," White said. "He filled the holes."

Brooks, who has had a strong camp, led the team with four receptions for 31 yards.

"Robert has improved dramatically," Favre said. "He's catching the ball well. He upped my confidence in him today."

Thompson, who pulled a quad-riceps muscle in last year's scrimmage, finished with 15 yards on three rushes and caught two passes for 30 yards.

White was particularly impressive on a third-and-1 play when he bulled his way into the backfield and stopped John Stephens cold.

"I just told (Lewis) . . . Holmgren said. "I would never run a short-yardage play right at him."

An area to work on? The running game, according to Holmgren. "For a first scrimmage, we did OK," he said.

Coleman proves to be a dud

NEW YORK — Vince Coleman was hired to be the New York Mets' firecracker, a leadoff hitter with explosive speed who could steal bases and score runs. But he has been mostly a dud. And a detriment.

Just when the 32-year-old left fielder with hamstrings as fragile as violin strings has remained healthy enough to generate interest in a trade that would liberate the Mets from his surly attitude as well as the remainder of his four-year $11.95 million contract, he has done something stupid. Again.

DAVE ANDERSON

Instead of playing baseball like a firecracker, Vince Coleman tossed a firecracker near a group of fans outside Dodger Stadium after Saturday's game. The burst reportedly injured a 1-year-old girl's eye, cheek and finger, an 11-year-old boy's leg and a 33-year-old woman's eardrum.

Monday, Los Angeles Fire Department investigators reported their findings to the district attorney's office, which will determine the extent of Coleman's alleged crime: misdemeanor or felony.

But no matter the outcome, the Mets should light the fuse on Coleman's poisonous presence. If possible, trade him. If necessary, release him and swallow his $3 million on next season's contract.

Ever since the Mets signed the six-time National League stolen base leader in 1990, Coleman has been involved in incidents that question his responsibility, judgment and sense of team.

He has had heated arguments with both Jeff Torborg, the former Mets manager, and third base coach Mike Cuddage.

In the Shea Stadium clubhouse earlier this season, he swung a golf club that struck Dwight Gooden's pitching shoulder.

He complained that the soft basepaths at Shea were preventing him from making the Hall of Fame.

Along with Gooden and former Mets outfielder Darryl Boston, he was named, but never charged, in the alleged 1991 rape of a New York woman at the team's spring training base in Port St. Lucie, Fla.

Coleman's answer to the firecracker incident must be more than his usual sullen glare.

Not long ago an unidentified Mets player tossed firecrackers behind reporters huddled around Anthony Young's locker in the Shea clubhouse. Jay Horwitz, the Mets' director of public relations, insisted Monday that Coleman was not the culprit.

But the question remains: Why was Coleman carrying a firecracker on his way to a postgame barbecue at Dodgers outfielder Eric Davis' home?

When members of the media approached Coleman for an explanation before Sunday's game, he cursed and snarled, "Get away from my locker." Davis acknowledged that Coleman had tossed a firecracker from the passenger seat of Davis' Cherokee Jeep toward a group of autograph-seeking fans.

"There was no intent or anger, or anything like that," Davis said. "It was a firecracker. It's not like we were in the car plotting. We were laughing about the firecracker. Every time you light a firecracker, you laugh. At least I do."

Davis might laugh, but in many states, including California, possession of a firecracker is a misdemeanor.

"It was Coleman," a fan, Salvador Hernandez, told The Associated Press. "He just tossed it out the window and it landed about 6 feet away. It exploded big. I saw him and Davis get into the car; that's how I knew it was him. Right after they threw it, they drove off real fast, laughing. He definitely meant to throw it at the fans."

In retrospect, Vince Coleman threw it at himself.

Pick and roll

Buckley starts with emphasis on interceptions and stardom

By Kent Youngblood
Sports reporter

GREEN BAY — Terrell Buckley has a simple way of summing up success.

"I measure everything," he said, "in picks."

That's picks as in pickoffs. Interceptions. The pot of gold at the end of every cornerback's rainbow.

It is Buckley's method of modern math. It is a system that he has used to put together this rough prediction for the number of picks he will pick up this season.

"I'd say between 10 and 15," said Buckley, the Packers' first-round draft choice in 1992.

That, of course, is substantially less than the 20 to 25 that Buckley was said to have predicted after last season ended.

"I don't know where you guys came up with that," Buckley said. "If I play like I'm capable of playing — if I have a great year — then you can talk those numbers. But if I have an average year, between 10 and 15. That should be good."

Considering that 15 interceptions would set a National Football League record, it would be hard not to agree. But how did Buckley arrive at this number? Grab a calculator and follow along:

For Buckley, 22, whose contract holdout kept him out of training camp and the first two regular-season games in 1992, just being in camp from the start is a plus.

"Being in camp is worth seven," Buckley said.

Then there's the benefit of having left end Reggie White in the face of opposing quarterbacks. "Reggie," Buckley said, "means four or five more."

Then there's Buckley simply being Buckley. Which means at least the three interceptions he grabbed last season while starting the final 12 games at left cornerback. "I know Terrell Buckley," Buckley said. "I've been with him for 22 years."

As you might have guessed, Buckley has not slowed down in the hyperbole department. But even Packers coaches think that, with a training camp under his belt, Buckley will be a force in 1993.

Buckley, who set a Florida State record with 21 career interceptions, had an up-and-down season in 1992. There was the punt return for a touchdown in his first game that helped the Packers rally for a victory over Cincinnati. And there were the seven fumbles — four of which he lost — in his next 24 chances.

There was the interception he returned for a touchdown against the Los Angeles Rams. And the dropped chances, pass interference calls and touchdowns he allowed. There were those who questioned his toughness against the run.

Expect a more consistent effort this year. "(Buckley) missed everything last year," said Dick Jauron, the Packers defensive backs coach. "Everything we put in early. All the technique

Brewers stop Red Sox

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tom Brunansky finally has a moment to savor in this forgettable season for him and the Milwaukee Brewers.

Brunansky went to the plate with a .175 batting average, but with two outs in the ninth inning Monday night, he hit a two-run home run to give the Brewers a 3-2 victory over Boston.

The stunning loss snapped the Red Sox's 10-game winning streak and knocked them out of first place in the American League East Division.

"That was a great comeback for our club. This is the type of thing we haven't had for a while," said Brunansky, who signed as a free agent with Milwaukee after spending most of three previous seasons with the Red Sox.

"Ever since spring training, I haven't felt comfortable at the plate and it's shown," he said. "I'm trying to help the club. I'm not worrying about my average."

Brunansky hit an 0-1 hanging slider from Jeff Russell (0-3), who blew only the third of his 29 save chances this season.

"It was real stupid," Russell said. "I knew before the pitch that he had a slider-speed bat. It wasn't a quality pitch."

B.J. Surhoff reached with a bunt single off Tony Fossas with one out in the ninth. When Greg Vaughn was announced as a pinch hitter, Russell replaced Fossas and got Vaughn on a fly to right.

Brunansky, in the lineup because Vaughn had been scratched with a sore muscle in his rib cage, hit his fifth home run of the season and then was mobbed by his teammates at the plate. Brunansky also hit a home run in Sunday's victory over Chicago.

"If anybody had to beat us, I'm glad it was Brunansky. He's a good man and a class person," said Red Sox manager Butch Hobson, whose team fell a half-game behind Toronto in the AL East.

Graeme Lloyd (3-1) picked up the victory by getting two outs in relief of rookie left-hander Rafael Nova, who gave up five hits and two walks in 8 1/3 innings.

Boston starter Roger Clemens allowed five hits in 7 1/3 innings. Mo Vaughn hit his 15th home run of the season after Andre Dawson singled in the fourth.

The Brewers scored in the fourth on a two-out double by Surhoff and single by Tom Lampkin.

Nova was making his first AL start and first in the major leagues since August 1990, when he was with San Francisco. The Brewers had called him up earlier in the day from their Class AAA farm club at New Orleans and optioned catcher Joe Kmak there.

NCAA punishes Big Ten

Associated Press

The University of Wisconsin and six other Big Ten Conference schools each will be prevented from granting several athletic scholarships in the next four years because they violated National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

Because the Big Ten allowed the schools to spend too much through grants-in-aid for athletes between 1979 and 1991, UW will be deprived of about five scholarships, UW officials said Monday.

The UW infractions involved track and field, golf, gymnastics, swimming, wrestling, baseball and women's soccer. UW dropped baseball and gymnastics in 1990.

Also, the Big Ten will lose $75,000 as its share of the NCAA 1993-94 income pool. Each of the seven universities might have to absorb a slice of the cutback.

The share usually is used for women's and minority scholarships, as well as officiating.

It is the first time in NCAA history that a national conference was fined, said David Swank, chairman of the Committee on Infractions.

The NCAA is requiring the seven schools to give up about 65 scholarships, the number overawarded from 1987 to 1991.

Iowa, the biggest violator, will forfeit 19.52 scholarships. Indiana loses 17.59 and Minnesota 15.32. The other losses: UW 4.9, Illinois 3.39, Michigan 2.57 and Purdue 2.27.

Each scholarship is determined by the sport and the school's tuition. Officials did not calculate the total loss to the seven schools, but said it represented 1.6 percent of all the league's scholarships.

The rule, created in 1978, excluded the extra costs of out-of-state tuition from the computation of financial aid for sports other than football and basketball.

Padres do it again: Hurst, Harris dumped

DENVER (AP) — The San Diego Padres unloaded pitchers Bruce Hurst and Greg Harris to the Colorado Rockies on Monday and became the team with the lowest payroll in the major leagues.

Hurst, a 35-year-old left-hander currently on the disabled list for the second time this season, is making $2.75 million. Harris, a 29-year-old right-hander, is making $2 million.

San Diego received two minor leaguers — catcher Brad Ausmus, who makes the $109,000 minimum, and pitcher Doug Bochtler, who was left in the minors. The Padres also will get another player, believed to be right-hander Andy Ashby, a former Philadelphia pitcher sent last month to Class AAA Colorado Springs.

"I think San Diego deserves a baseball team, and a good one," Hurst said in San Diego. "And if this is going to help it down the line, then it's a good move. But then if they strip it down and sell it, it'll be a sad day in San Diego and I hope that doesn't happen."

The deal, which came eight days after defending National League home run champion Fred McGriff was sent to the Atlanta Braves, dropped the Padres' payroll to $11.9 million, down from $24.5 million on opening day and $29.2 million at the start of the 1992 season.

"We felt that the bottom line is we had to acquire a catcher we could build around, and we got another young arm in Bochtler," said Padres general manager Randy Smith, hired from Colorado on June 9. "We've got a stable of quality arms that are as good as any in baseball."

On June 24, San Diego traded defending NL batting champion Gary Sheffield to the Florida Marlins.

San Diego now has 13 players at the minimum of $109,000 and just three above $1 million: outfielder Tony Gwynn ($3.75 million), pitcher Andy Benes ($2.05 million) and infielder Kurt Stillwell ($1.75 million). Gwynn is signed through 1995, while Benes and Stillwell are eligible for salary arbitration this winter.

The Padres will have received nine players for Hurst, Harris, McGriff and Sheffield. Only two are with the big-league club: Ausmus and reliever Trevor Hoffman, the principal in the Sheffield trade.

"We lost two guys of great importance, but we got some good players back," manager Jim Riggleman said. "This is the direction the ballclub is going in; getting some good young talent will hopefully feed our major league club."

Harris, 10-9 with a 3.67 earned run average, is scheduled to pitch Friday against San Francisco at Denver.

Hurst, recovering from shoulder surgery last October, threw 75 pitches Sunday in a simulated game. Rockies manager Don Baylor said Hurst's experience while pitching in Boston will help him in hitter-friendly Mile High Stadium.

"He won't let this ballpark affect him because he pitched in Fenway Park," Baylor said. "If he's healthy, he's going to help us, and I believe he will be healthy."

"Those are quality people going to Colorado, not just quality players," Gwynn said. "I'm frustrated with the situation. Hopefully, they've done all the dealing they're going to do, that's it."

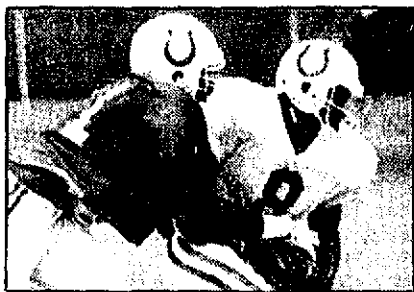

Harris, with the Padres in Chicago, said he was "excited about the potential of putting a team on the field to win next year. The fans alone make this exciting for me."

Harris is eligible for salary arbitration following this season, when he completes a $3.05 million, two-year deal. Hurst is finishing a $5 million, two-year contract and Colorado gets a $3 million option for next season with a $400,000 buyout.

"This is the first step of what we hope are many moves as we continue to try to upgrade our ballclub for the remainder of the '93 season and for the future," Rockies general manager Bob Gebhard said.

Ausmus, 24, hit .270 in 76 games at Colorado Springs with two homers and 33 RBIs. Bochtler, a 23-year-old right-hander, has split his season between Class A Central Valley and Colorado Springs. He was 1-4 with a 6.93 ERA for the Sky Sox in 12 games, while going 3-1 with a 3.40 ERA in eight starts at Central Valley. Ashby was 0-4 with an 8.50 ERA in 20 games for the Rockies.

NCAA slap: UW loses scholarships

Wisconsin and six other Big Ten universities will each be prevented from granting several athletic scholarships in the next four years because they violated NCAA rules.

Because the conference allowed the schools to spend too much through grants-in-aid for athletes between 1979 and 1991, UW will be deprived of about five scholarships, the university said Monday.

The Badgers' infractions involved varsity track, golf, gymnastics, swimming, wrestling, baseball and women's soccer. UW dropped baseball and gymnastics in 1991.

It is the first time in NCAA history that a national conference was fined, said David Swank, chairman of the Committee on Infractions.

"The schools were not aware they were violating... rules," Swank said. "Whatever advantage they gained will be taken away from them in a four year period."

Iowa — the biggest violator — will forfeit 19.52 scholarships. Indiana loses 17.59 and Minnesota 15.32.

Other losses are: Wisconsin 4.9; Illinois 3.39; Michigan 2.57; and Purdue 2.27.

Griffith teammate headed for Pitt

Thomas Hamilton, a 7-foot-4, 310-pound center, will enroll at the University of Pittsburgh after being denied entrance to Illinois because he did not meet academic requirements, athletic director Oval Jaynes said.

Hamilton, who played at Chicago's Martin Luther King High School, will begin attending classes in the fall, but is not eligible to play basketball until the 1994-95 season.

Hamilton, a high school teammate of Wisconsin recruit Rashard Griffith, was admitted after a review by Pitt's academic committee.

Mussina's sorry for Gaston boos

Baltimore Orioles pitcher Mike Mussina plans to apologize to Toronto Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston for putting him in an awkward situation during the All-Star game at Camden Yards. Mussina began warming up in the bullpen on his own initiative during the late innings of the All-Star game on July 13. Fans started booing loudly when Gaston did not bring Mussina in to get the final out of the American League's 9-3 victory.

Gaston was criticized by the media, because no one realized Mussina had chosen to get up and throw on his own. The game ended with the roar of boos, despite the AL's victory.

"I want to apologize," Mussina said Sunday. "I know I've obviously caused him problems. I heard they were advertising his fax number on the radio. I'm going to try to talk to him, if nothing else, to apologize for whatever trouble I've caused him."

Mussina said he and Toronto pitcher Pat Hentgen were told before the game they would not pitch unless the game went into extra innings.

Mussina's decision to apologize might reduce some of the fallout from the controversy before the Orioles open a two-game series at the SkyDome tonight. But Mussina said he wouldn't be surprised to hear some booing by Toronto fans.

The Blue Jays finish the season at Baltimore.

Japanese give nod to Packers

Lucas

They were served a slice of the Heartland from the Field of Dreams to Wrigley Field; from the Packer Hall of Fame to Great America; from the Country Kitchen to the Hard Rock Cafe.

Along the way, they ate at Smoky's Club in Madison, the Timbers in Platteville and Piggy's Barbeque in La Crosse. But they fed off Reggie White, Joe Montana and Mike Singletary.

Players gravitate to players, and the Mycal Bears are no different in this respect than the Chicago Bears. You can put it to a vote. And, unofficially, they did with a show of hands.

The Green Bay Packers, by proclamation, were the most impressive team in the Cheese League, more impressive than the Bears, the Saints or the Chiefs. And White, physically, was easily the most impressive player. Active player.

But Singletary, in the Bear flesh, was the one they wanted to see... and be seen with.

"They all wanted their photo with him," Joe Levelis said. "And it took about an hour to get Singletary out of there."

The former all-pro linebacker was the focal point recently for a touring group of Japanese football players. Levelis, 32, coaches the Mycal Bears, a company team which represents a large department store chain in Japan.

The Chicago Bears' training camp in Platteville was one stop on the week-long tour which also included layovers in Green Bay, La Crosse, Madison and Dubuque.

Given the latter's proximity to Dyersville, Iowa, the Japanese were afforded an opportunity to visit the Field of Dreams.

"And that may have been the one thing they enjoyed the most," said John Chadima, an administrative aide to UW football coach Barry Alvarez, who set up the itinerary and helped coordinate the tour with Levelis.

"They saw the movie and they knew all about Kevin Costner. That type of thing. Joe told me most of them played baseball in high school. And they must have been out there for a couple of hours, throwing, catching and hitting the ball around."

Today, they will watch the San Diego Padres

Brunansky HR stuns Red Sox

MILWAUKEE (AP) — No excuses from Boston Red Sox reliever Jeff Russell for a pitch he shouldn't have thrown. No excuses, either, from veteran Tom Brunansky, whose first season with the Milwaukee Brewers has been just short of a nightmare.

But Monday night, it was Brunansky beating Russell and the Brewers beating the Red Sox 3-2 to end Boston's 10-game winning streak.

Brunansky, with a .179 batting average, hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth off Russell, who had eight straight saves and 26 saves in 28 chances entering the game.

"You make a quality pitch and there is no problem. You throw him a pitch he's capable of hitting and he's going to hit it," said Russell, who threw a hanging breaking pitch. Brunansky has had problems all season with fastballs.

"It happens, it happens. It was real stupid. I knew before the pitch that he had a slider-speed bat. It wasn't a quality pitch. It looked like he was looking for an off-speed pitch. It was a mistake by me. It's tough, but now we have to bounce back," Russell said.

Brunansky has been trying to bounce out of a season-long slump. After only his fifth homer of the season, his teammates mobbed him at the plate, an unfamiliar scene for a last-place team like the Brewers.

"Ever since spring training, I haven't felt comfortable at the plate and it's shown," Brunansky said. "I'm trying to help the club. I'm not worrying about my average because it's been horse feathers."

"That was a great comeback for our ball club. There are a lot of players who are young and will be counted on in the future. This is the type of thing we haven't had for a while. It was good for them to experience it."

Big questions demanding Bear answers

PLATTEVILLE —

The Bear facts...

Question: Has

Michael McCaskey

become unusually

generous with finances or have

Dave Wannstedt's

Answer: Knowing the Miser of the Midway, what do you think? When Wannstedt agreed to terms, Halas Hall let it be known he signed for $550,000 per. Now comes word from an impeccable source that his annual salary is a good cut lower, down around $400,000, making us wonder if the original figure was planted to improve the owner's spendthrift image. Though his actual salary places him among the NFL's lesser-paid head coaches, Wannstedt says, "I don't care about money." He might care more about why the larger figure was leaked last winter — and what it suggests about the front office.

Q: Why is the lovable matchstick man, Tommy Waddle, being demoted to a backup receiver's role?

A: Because, once again, a coaching staff bases first impressions on his lack of speed rather than his mammoth heart. Wannstedt and strategist Ron Turner are so keen on Xeroxing the so-called San Francisco passing offense, they can't see Waddle through the fog. They dream of Anthony Morgan as Jerry Rice and Curtis Conway as John Taylor, which is fine except for three little problems: (1) Jim Harbaugh isn't exactly Steve Young; (2) Morgan and Conway are preciously young receivers given to mistakes, especially rookie Conway; and (3) Harbaugh and Waddle have a karma that must be maintained. Tommy Tough Guy will have to do what he's always done — force his way into the lineup with courage, hands and acrobatics. He will.

Q: Why does Harbaugh walk around camp like a world war is beginning?

A: It is, in his mind. The enemy: Media and fans who don't think he's remotely worth $5 million this season, same as John Elway. Indeed, no one in camp, not even Wannstedt and the new staff, has the pressure of Harbaugh. This isn't a widely-known fact, but his contract isn't guaran-

Montana out vs. Packers?

RIVER FALLS (AP) — Kansas City Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer said Monday that quarterback Joe Montana may be held out of the team's first preseason game.

Schottenheimer said Montana, who did not play in the scrimmage with New Orleans last weekend, would play no more than four to six quarters during the four preseason games. He said he has discussed with Montana the possibility that he would not play in the first one, Aug. 7 against Green Bay in Milwaukee.

"It would not be inconsistent that our starting quarterback does not play in the first preseason game," Schottenheimer said. "But those things can change. If it looks like our timing isn't what it needs to be, he could very well end up getting a quarter or so."

"If we think he needs the work, then he'll play. Otherwise, he won't."

Second-year cornerback Terrell Buckley is predicting a big year for himself.

Buckley continues talking and learning in first camp

By Rick Gano

Associated Press

GREEN BAY — Terrell Buckley, never modest about his ability on the football field, says working with a pass rusher like Reggie White should make him an even better player with the Green Bay Packers.

"Any time you have a pass rush and the quarterback has to throw on rhythm, for a guy like myself, it helps me tremendously," he said. "Maybe I can add 10 picks (interceptions)."

Buckley said in December he hoped to make 20 to 25 interceptions in 1993. He picked off three passes last season.

After the Packers made him their top pick in 1992, Buckley held out of training camp before signing a four-year, $6.4 million. He missed the first two games of the season, then returned a 58-yard kick for a touchdown in his NFL debut.

After that, however, he fumbled seven punts and lost three. He was replaced by Robert Brooks. Buckley now predicts he will get his job back.

"As far as I know, I'm on punts. I'll be back there," he said.

"He wants to return punts but we'll wait and see. We want him to be comfortable at the corner," Packers coach Mike Holmgren said.

Skipping training camp made it difficult for Buckley last season. He deflected 16 passes in addition to his interceptions, but was beaten several times for big plays.

"We thought he was really coming at the end of last season. We all know missing training camp hurt early," Holmgren said.

"He's working on the technical part of the game. Last year he was just doing everything he could to play using his athletic abilities."

Buckley said he needs training camp to learn some of the "checks" that cornerbacks must be able to read to determine coverage.

"I didn't have any problem with how I played last year. There were just some
