An Early Head Start program for county

It's for babies, toddlers, parents

By Jennifer A. Galloway

A $3.8 million grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is helping Dane County launch its first Head Start program for infants, toddlers and their parents.

The federal agency's Head Start Bureau has agreed to provide the Dane County Parent Council with $760,000 a year for five years to create an "Early Head Start" program aimed at helping the very youngest children and even pregnant mothers in poor families get information and support needed for healthy infant development.

The new program, which will begin enrolling children later this year, will offer services to 80 infants and their families, said Barb Knipfer, children services director at the Dane County Parent Council. The program will initially focus on serving families in South Madison neighborhoods. The council, which runs the county's traditional Head Start program from its offices on Red Arrow Trail, is negotiating for space nearby for the infant program.

Knipfer said new research about infant brain development and the importance of early intervention in babies' growth and learning have led to an expansion of Early Head Start programs across the country. Several communities in Wisconsin operate infant Head Start programs but the Dane County project will be the first in the area.

'We're really excited about it," said Knipfer. "It's important on so many levels, including the need for adequate prenatal care and the need to support and enhance the parent-child relationship from the very beginning."

The Dane County Parent Council's regular Head Start program, which serves 700 children in Dane and Green counties, requires that children be 3 years old to partici-

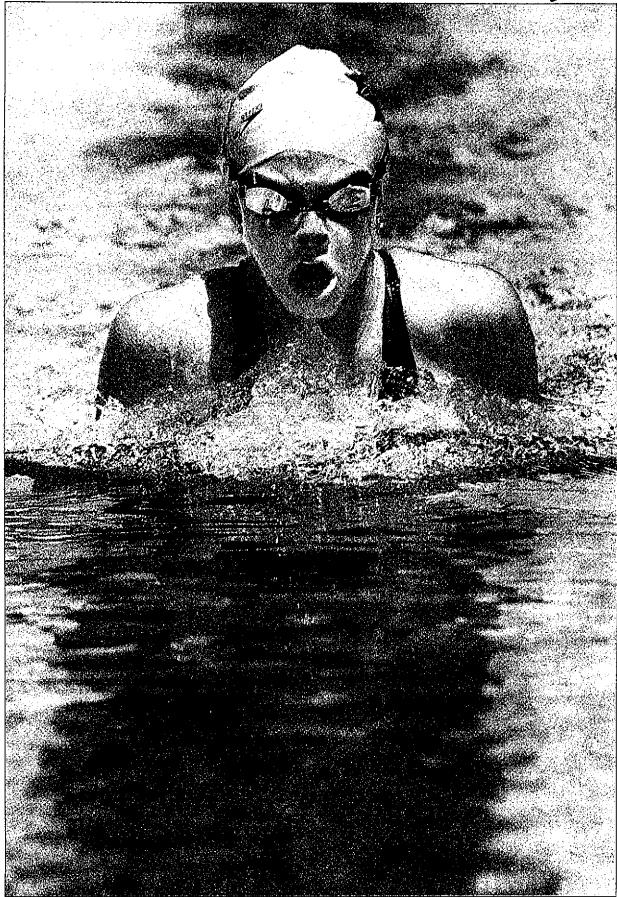

In addition to providing prenatal care to pregnant women, the new program will offer infant and toddler care that emphasizes continuity and stability, which have been identified as key components of healthy development, Knipfer said. The council will create a community and parent advisory committee in conjunction with other area human services agencies and will also assign family advocates to work with program participants.

Knipfer said she expects the Early Head Start program to become a permanent service for needy families in Madison.

To be eligible for the new program, families must be receiving some form of public assistance or be at or below the federal poverty level, defined as annual income of $16,450 for a family of four or $10,850 for a family of two.

For information on enrolling in Dane County's Early Head Start program, call the Dane County Parent Council at 275-6740.

13 machinists in Ohio will be splitting $161.5 million

By Doug Alden

WESTERVILLE, Ohio - After years of pooling money to buy lottery tickets, a group of machinists who call themselves "The Lucky 13" stepped forward Thursday to claim the biggest prize yet - the $295.7 million Powerball jackpot.

One of the 13 workers at Automation Tooling Systems in this Columbus suburb drove 100 miles to buy 130 tickets just over the Indiana line for Wednesday's drawing.

"It took a long time to believe we actually hit it," said John Jarrell, a burly man with a long mustache who was the first of the 13 men to identify himself. "You go from totally excited to scared to

The Lucky 13 won't officially be the winners until the Indiana lottery office validates the ticket.

The jackpot was worth $295.7 million in payments over 25 years, but the winners took the cash option — one payment of about $161.5 million, Indiana lottery officials said. The Lucky 13 intend to split the money evenly, for $12.42 million per person before taxes,

'There will be cousins they haven't heard from in years and years that you know are going to say I need a loan or I've got a great deal for you. They've got to learn to say no to all those things.'

their lawyer said Thursday.

The winning numbers were picked randomly by a Powerball computer at a Speedway gas station in Richmond, Ind.

Jarrell and his wife, Sandy, both decked out in black Harley Davidson apparel, said they and their three children were already racking up quite a wish list. Tops on Sandy's list was her own Harley to match John's.

"I've already got mine. She wants one of her own," Jarrell

The other members of the Lucky 13 tried to remain anonymous Thursday when they met with Columbus business attorney Larry Sturtz at their plant. Managers of the Canadian-owned assembly systems plant, besieged by reporters and photographers, slipped the 13 workers out in a crowd of employees released early for lunch

The prospective millionaires all showed up at their jobs but didn't do much work Thursday, company spokeswoman Barbara Palmer

"Actually they came to gloat, I think," Palmer joked. "No, they came to share in their good fortune with us.

Sturtz told the 13 men, ranging from their 20s to 50s, to plan their estates, get sound investment advice and be wary of long-lost friends or relatives who decide it's time to get reacquainted.

'There will be cousins they haven't heard from in years and years that you know are going to say I need a loan or I've got a great deal for you. They've got to learn to say no to all those things," he said.

Teach values in schools, survey says

Art, literature fall low on list

Taking everything, and the kitchen sink

These travelers prefer sightseeing from comforts of home

By Phil Brinkman

As getaways go, this weekend's gathering of 700 motor homes on the grounds of the Dane County Exposition Center could not be much more in the center of things.

Their big rigs are parked cheek to jowl in the summer sun, just off the Beltline. The steady thrum of generators fills the air.

But to pity these vacationers is to misunderstand them. They live to prove the maxim that any patch of pavement can be home.

"We can go on a Wal-Mart parking lot and have the same facilities I get at home," boasted John Brandenburger, of Cuba, Mo., relaxing with friends outside his 40-foot Foretravel Unihome. "I got my icecube maker, I got my television, I got everything I want in there.'

The rally by the Midwest Area Cooperative, a branch of the Family Motor Coach Association, drew an estimated 1,600 enthusiasts from throughout the Midwest. It continues through today, with workshops and seminars on everything from decoupage and Swedish weaving to diesel generators.

Not a vacation? Just ask anyone who came.

"You stop somewhere in a motor home and you'll talk to everyone around you. You go to a motel and you don't even speak to them," said Lois Buttolph, of Rockwell City, Iowa.

In fact, one gets the impression that motor home living - and some do live in them full time - is one continuous vacation.

As soon as they're parked, drivers could be seen rolling out awnings, adjusting satellite antennas, setting out pictures of the grandkids and putting up card tables on the patches of indoor-outdoor carpeting.

"We're just people who like to travel — and take the kitchen with us," said Wayne McCray, of Compton, Ill.

He could have added: the bedroom, bathroom and living room. Some of the homes, which can cost up to $500,000 or more, are truly palatial, with sliding room extensions, cherry paneling and leather sofas. Only the seat belts and the steering wheel seem out of place.

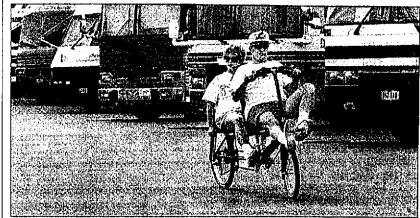

Even the more modest models can provide all the comforts of home. That's the appeal for Ron Anderson and his wife, Ruth, snowbirds from Bagley, who spend their winters in Arizona in their 39-foot Holiday Rambler.

"One thing we have in common is none of us like motels," Ron An-

Kelsey made UW hockey what it is

For long-time members of Madison's thriving hockey community, the juxtaposition was striking. There, on the front page of the sports section, was a story about how the University of Wisconsin will draw at least 12,000 fans per game when it moves to the Kohl Center this winter.

Meanwhile, buried deep in a story on an inside page, there was a brief mention of the death of Fenton Kelsey Jr., the man who made it all possible.

Kelsey, who died Tuesday at 85, had a passion for hockey equal to that of Bob Johnson, the coach who led UW to national prominence in the 1970s. But Johnson never would have had the chance to become Badger Bob had it not been for Kelsey, a local businessman who paved the way for UW hockey by starting the youth hockey program on the East Side in the 1950s and building what is now called Hartmeyer Ice Arena

Kelsey was one of a group of local hockey pioneers who per-suaded then-UW athletic director Ivan Williamson that the sport could be a financial success at the school. As a result, hockey, dor-mant on the UW campus for 40 years, was reborn in 1962 with John Riley as coach.

'I think you could call Fenton the father of the rebirth of Wisconsin hockey," said Dr. Conrad Andringa, a long-time hockey booster who had two sons play for UW. "It was his rink that let the Badgers get started when they did.

Indeed, it was the construction of Hartmeyer that laced up the skates for a hockey program that has won five NCAA titles and led the nation in attendance from 1969 to 1994. UW hockey didn't take off until it moved into the Dane County Coliseum later in the 1960s, but it got its start in the raucous little East Side rink that Kelsey built largely with his own Hartmeyer, which eventually was sold to the city, almost bankrupted Kelsey. However, in terms of what it did for the city, Phil Mendel, another of Madison's hockey pioneers, believes Kelsey's vision and generosity rank right up there with much larger financial gifts made in recent years by Herb Kohl for the Kohl Center and Jerry Frautschi for the proposed Overture Project.

"I think that's what Fenton gave to Madison on a smaller scale," Mendel said. "He gave his everything to get hockey going here. That's a tremendous legacy to leave. Because, frankly, without a place to play, Ivy would have had to say, 'What are we going to do? Are we going to play at Vilas Park subject to the vagaries of the weather?' No, we had a rink, and it was Fenton Kelsey's doing that did

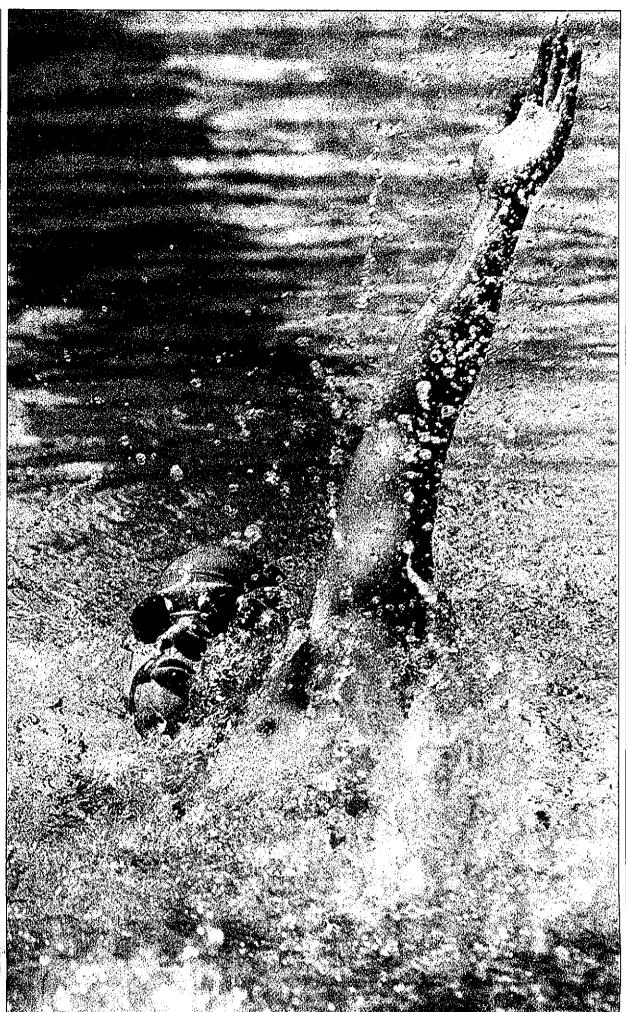

It has been said that Kelsey won a bet with Williamson that resulted in the creation of the program. According to legend, Williamson told Kelsey that if his youth team won a national tournament, he would start a program at UW. Soon afterward, a team coached by Kelsey and Riley brought home a national juvenile

While that story can't be confirmed, this much can. Kelsey, a native of Evanston, Ill., who played college and semi-pro hockey, was instrumental in creating a serious youth program on the East Side, a program that today is the Dane County Youth Hockey Association.

Kelsey was also one of the founders of the Blue Line Club, a UW booster organization that became the largest club of its kind in the country. The club was always unique in that it supported both youth and college hockey. "He really helped get that club going," Andringa said. "Obviously, Bob Johnson was a tremendous influence, but we'd go to (Kelsey's) house for meetings and got the alumni game going that was so instrumental for youth hockey. That's how it all spun together. He got the youth hockey people interested and then we got behind the Badgers.'

They're still behind the Badgers, in record numbers if the ticket projections are accurate. So when 15,000 fans settle into their comfortable Kohl Center seats for a game against Minnesota this winter, they should remember that it all began when Fenton Kelsey Jr. opened his own hockey palace on the East Side in 1960.

Kelly drives in two runs for Cardinals

By Jason Strait

ST. LOUIS — Pat Kelly has found a home at the bottom of the St. Louis Cardinals lineup.

Batting out of the ninth spot, Kelly drove in two runs Thursday as the Cardinals snapped the Milwaukee Brewers' four-game winning streak with a 3-2 National League win.

Matt Morris (2-1) allowed one hit over five innings to get the win. Morris, making his fifth start after spending three months on the disabled list with a strained right shoulder, struck out four and allowed only a single to Marquis Grissom with two outs in the fourth inning. However, he walked four Brewers batters and left after throwing 92 pitches.

The Cardinals' Mark McGwire

failed to hit a home run for the second straight game. He was 0for-3 with a strikeout and his major league-leading 111th walk. Mark Petkovsek relieved Morris and pitched three innings, giving up one unearned run in the eighth inning after loading the bases with no outs. Rick Croushore worked the

"It's not good enough," he said.

"We're in a situation where we're trying to win 10 in a row. Two out of three is not good enough. We won't catch anybody winning two out of three."

The Cardinals scored three times off Milwaukee starter Scott Karl (8-5) in the second inning.

Brickyard's gains are Indy's losses

By David Poole

INDIANAPOLIS — It's time once again for the annual game of Apples vs. Oranges.

When Winston Cup race teams head for Indianapolis Motor Speedway for the Brickyard 400, people start asking the question there's no way to really answer.

Has NASCAR's event at America's most famous motorsports venue grown big enough and important enough to challenge the Indianapolis 500 in prestige? Winston Cup practice began Wednesdow at the giant 2.5 paids appearance. day at the giant 2.5-mile complex. Ernie Irvan won the pole at qualifying Thursday. Come Saturday, more than 300,000 will fill the speedway, which hosted the first 500 in 1911.

"The Indianapolis 500 has a history that the Brickyard 400 doesn't have," said Jeff Burton, citing the Indy Racing League event's obvious advantage. "I would venture to say that right now there's more interest in the Brickyard 400 than there is in the Indy 500, but the Indy 500 is the Indy 500 just like the Daytona 500 is the Daytona Both events sell out each year, but the Indy 500 crowd is bigger because the speedway also fills every available inch of its infield with fans each Memorial Day weekend. For the Winston Cup race, there is no infield camping.

Since the IRL's split with the CART circuit, however, ticket scalpers routinely make a bigger profit off Brickyard 400 tickets.

"I think the people outside of Indianapolis would probably say it's bigger now," Kenny Irwin said of the Brickyard 400. Irwin was born in Indianapolis and cut his racing teeth in open-wheel cars.

"You see that Brickyard tickets are a lot harder to get than the Indy car tickets, so that's one thing that tells you the Brickyard is gaining momentum." The 500 still draws a solid TV audience worldwide, but its U.S. ratings have slipped 35 percent from 1995, the year before the IRL-CART split. The Daytona 500 has become America's most-watched auto race.

"The Indianapolis 500 is still one of the most exciting and prestigious races in the world," said Dale Jarrett, who won the Brickyard 400 in 1996.

Bobby Hamilton puts the whole issue in perspective: "I don't know if the Brickyard 400 is surpassing the Indy 500. ... All I know is it is one of the biggest and most important and richest races we run all year. If my car is sitting in Victory Lane at the end of the day, you can rest assured I will believe the Brickyard 400 is bigger than the Indianapolis 500."

Disrud, Lemon share lead

Both shoot 68 in opening round

By Nick Zizzo

The 50-or-so golfers on the patio outside of the Odana Hills clubhouse Thursday were more impressed with Mark Disrud than he was with himself.

Disrud, 38, was accepting congratulations for being — at the time - the leader in the clubhouse, and was genuinely unimpressed by his enort in the Madison Men's City Golf Tournament.

This is the honest-to-God truth. It was one of those days I played good," he said after being one of only 10 golfers to finish below par 72. "When I needed to get up and down I did, and I made a couple of 4 . 5 , 6-foot putts."

Disrud's ball-striking ability enabled him to be in position for short putts as he rolled to a 4under-par 68. He was the sole leader until Jim Lemon came in an hour later with the same score.

Brian Murphy, who offset a bogey with four birdies on the back nine, fired a 69. Troy Bilderback, Mike Goode and Scott Baker are 2 shots off the pace at 70.

The second round will move out of the city, as The Meadows of Six Mile Creek in Waunakee makes its city tournament debut. Disrud said he knows the whole event is not a sprint, but a marathon.

MADISON MEN'S CITY GOLF

"(Today) is a new day. One round does not win a tournament, let's put it that way," said Disrud. the sixth-place finisher in last year's event. "Somebody else can shoot a low round and that's why it is a four-round tournament.

Disrud started on the back nine. An eagle on the par-5, 471-yard sixth hole - where he hit an 8iron approach from 170 yards to within 6 feet of the pin - got Disrud to 6-under with three holes to play. Disrud bogeyed the next two holes before parring No. 9.

Lemon, the former Madison West and current University of Wisconsin golfer, was just as effective. The 20-year old junior-to-be had three birdies and one bogey on each nine.

After shooting 2-under on the back nine, Lemon birdied the first two holes on the front to get to 4under. He then went bogey-parbirdie on the next three before closing with four straight pars.

Lemon said The Meadows will be a good test for the 114 golfers.

Being in the fairway is going to be a huge advantage, which I think is hard there. And I think knowing where to land on the green .. greens' placement is key," he said. Mainly, you want to keep it in play there.

Bilderback, 26, took an unusual golfing road. After graduating from Madison East, he went into the Air Force and then enrolled in the Golf Academy of the South in Orlando, Fla.

'I'm not even going to think about (Thursday). I want to play just as steady," he said. "I'll get my feet wet (today at The Meadows) and we get to find out who the players are.'

titles Madison high schools have won through the years.

It all started here. This is the aquatic infrastructure of the city, a meet with a 37-year history ensuring the future of the sport in the area. It's a much bigger hit han "Waterworld."

'This is something you plan for Il summer," Susie Topp said.

Topp swam for the Middleton pool as a kid - she still holds a meet record in the 100 freestyle and now swims at the University of Wisconsin. She spent the summer as an assistant coach in Mid-

"It's the big event," Topp said of the All-City meet. "For a lot of kids, it isn't just about getting your best times. It's the excitement that surrounds it. We try to get them pumped up.

There is friendly competition, especially among the pools of like size. Ridgewood (the current power) and Shorewood, for example, competed against each other in a dual meet this summer for the 37th straight year.

"We kind of billed it as a (Green Bay) Packers-(Chicago) Bears thing," Ridgewood coach Tim Ritchie said.

But what makes this meet so special is that it caters to both easy-going and elite swimmers. That's one of the reasons they keep coming back, year after year, to this meet. Even Jane Evans, a 14-year-old who will be competing at the U.S.S. Junior National

At the other end of the spectrum, this meet gives swimmers who might never make it to a WIAA state meet the chance to compete in a big event.

grams that reach the levels that we reach here." Middleton coach Bob Joers said. "The kids that grow up, from 6, 7, 8 years old, they stay with this program. And they want to be a part of it.'

They want to be part of the extravaganza.

"My guess is that it evolves into something that will follow them through their swimming careers,' McKeith said. "They may swim Hill Farm vs. Parkerest in a dual meet. And then, a little later in the summer, they'll start swimming together on the Memorial High School team. Then, a little later in the fall, they may swim with the Badger Dolphins or the West Y or the East Y. So they may be competitors or teammates on two or three levels. I don't know of many other programs like it."

 cool temperatures and overcast skies - four other drivers surpassed the old mark of 177.394. But none really came close to Irvan, who earned the 20th pole of his career and first of the season. Dale Jarrett, the 1996 Brickyard winner, took the outside position on the front row for Saturday's race with a lap of 178.596, followed by 1994 race winner Jeff Gordon at 178.324, rookie Kenny Irwin at 178.260 and Jeff Green at 178.324.

"We sat there and bit our fingernails and tried to figure out who was going to beat us," said Irvan. "Obviously, there were some pretty heavy hitters there that had a pretty good shot. Probably the one we were most nervous about was Jeff Gordon."

"If there hadn't been any rain. our setup might have been better for conditions," he said.

Irvan is in his first year driving the No. 36 Grand Prix for Nelson Bowers. "It was an awesome lap," Irvan said. "I don't know how I could have made it any quicker." Among the drivers failing to lock in a starting spot for Saturday by qualifying among the top 25 were former Brickyard winners Ricky Rudd, the defending champion, and Dale Earnhardt, who were 27th and 28th.

Both were expected to stand on their first-day laps on today in the final round of qualifying for the 43-car field.

Sprague wins truck race: Jack Sprague raced back from a late pit stop and a bumping incident with Ron Hornaday to win the NAS-CAR Craftsman Truck Series Cummins 200 race at Indianapolis Raceway Park in Clermont, Ind.

Sprague, whose Chevrolet came out of the pits seventh after changing right-side tires 50 laps from the finish of the 200-lap race, swapped the lead twice with Lonnie Rush before catching Hornaday's Chevy.

The bump sent series point leader Hornaday into the outside wall and to a 28th-place finish. Sprague, who averaged 77.235 mph in a race slowed nine times by caution consuming 44 laps. then pulled away from Tony Roper to win by 2.024 seconds.

"I feel terrible about that deal (but) I don't feel I did anything wrong," Sprague said. "I was up to his door and I got on the brakes. I couldn't have gone any lower (on the track)."

Tour de France loses another team

The scandal-rocked Tour de France lost another team before today's racing, then returned to home territory with Magnus Backstedt of Sweden winning the 19th stage of the cycling showcase.

With two days to go before the finish in Paris, TVM pulled out of the race. That reduced the field to just 14 teams compared to 21 at

The race, reeling from a drug investigation and protests by the riders, featured just 96 cyclists for the start of today's 151-mile leg that began in Switzerland and ended in Autun.

Thirteen riders broke away early and built a big lead. Less than two hours into the stage, the margin was up to more than 11 minutes. At the end, the pack was 16 minutes behind.

In the final miles, Backstedt took a few riders away and won in the final sprint,

Marco Pantani of Italy retained the leader's yellow jersey despite finishing behind the main pack. He was not concerned with the leaders, all far behind in the overall standings. Pantani still has lead of 5 minutes, 42 second lead over Bobby Julich of the United States. Defending champion Jan Ullrich is 5:56 behind.

Jean-Francois Pescheux, the Tour's sporting director, said the TVM team, which is at the center of the drug scandal, had informed him of its withdrawal

Ditka still king for Bears fans

Television cameras followed his every move, reporters flocked to him, fans in Chicago Bears attire begged for photographs and autographs.

Dave Wannstedt? No, that's the Chicago Bears' current coach. He could not compete with former Chicago coach Mike Ditka, now in charge of the New Orleans Saints.
The Bears and Saints got together Thursday for the first of three days of practice.

"In my dreams, he's still the Bears coach," said Larry Pearson, 48, who drove six hours from Wheaton, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, to see Ditka. "It's the only place he'll ever really seem natural."

sayings is "it's not about me," it frequently is.

For almost half an hour Ditka fielded questions from more than 40 reporters during his press conference while Wannstedt waited alone across the field. When Ditka finished, perhaps a dozen reporters meandered over to Wannstedt. The others continued to watch Ditka as he acknowledged cheers from his

So you're a loser. You didn't win the Powerball jackpot.

But even though you blew it and didn't pick 8, 39, 43, 45, 49 and Powerball 13 to win the record $295.7 million payout, you still could win a million by catching No. 46, 47, 48 or 49 this weekend at Turner Field in Atlanta.

With Mark McGwire in town for the Braves-Cardinals series, Coca-Cola has put $1 million in a red cooler guarded by half a dozen offduty policemen at Turner Field and will give it to any fan who catches a home run ball at its Sky Field attraction — 435 feet from home plate and 80 feet above the stands.

The fan who catches a McGwire homer — or any other home run ball — in Coca-Cola's designated area won't actually receive the $1 million in cash, but a 20-year annuity that pays $50,000 a year.

- Darren Sharper learned a valuable lesson about the importance of preparation for the Green Bay Packers' trip here.

'Next time, if I ever come here again, I'll know how to prepare myself," Sharper said late Thursday afternoon, following the team's arrival at its hotel. "I won't sleep before I get on the airplane.'

After the 12-hour flight from Chicago, Packers players were in agreement that it was an awfully long time to spend in an airplane. Some handled it better than

"It sucked," said nose tackle Bob Kuberski. "The flight was long. The bus ride (to the hotel) was long, and now walking up (to the room) is long. Just like we expected.'

'Actually, it was kind of comfortable," guard Marco Rivera said. "Everybody had their ownrow, we put about four movies on (and the) food was good. It was a great ride over.'

With a traveling party of 160 people, the Packers flew in a spacious Boeing 747-400 chartered jet. They made one stop in Chicago to refuel since the runway in Green Bay can't handle fully fueled large planes.

Among the movies the players watched was Titanic.

Brett Favre talks to Japanese reporter Junko Kubo during the Packers' practice Friday in Tokyo.

"When I walked back (in the plane) a few times, most of them were sleeping, or watching the movies," said coach Mike Holmgren, who arrived at the hotel with his wife, Kathy, in a car, a few minutes ahead of the seven buses carrying the players and team offi-

"We had continual movies going on. It went well.

Flying that many people, plus equipment, to a foreign country with all the proper documents is a major undertaking. Not only did they need passports for every-body, but also certificates of eligibility and work visas.

Then, when everything appeared to be wrapped up, the team went out and signed Raymont Harris, Terry McDaniel and David Klingler near the start of training

The wheels of government normally move slowly, so the Packers were still hustling last week to get everything done with the new players. One person with the National Football League office who was helping out had to drive from Green Bay to Chicago last week to get work visas for the new players.

"They really did a great job because it only took us 10 minutes to go through customs," said Mark Schiefelbein, the team's travel coordinator. "Typically, it takes you an hour and a half.

"What turned out to be the biggest headache before actually went very well. Thats the most important thing.'

With a training-camp roster of more than 80 players, compared with 49 who travel in the regular season, the team also had more equipment than usual. To get through customs, every piece of equipment had to be itemized, can be restricted by the system. Flash back to the early '90s when a jury ruled in favor of the players, declaring that the old Plan B system was too restrictive and unfair because there was little or no player movement. The new free agency, however, created some new problems for a select group.

"It isn't working for the franchise players," said Tampa Bay offensive tackle Paul Gruber during his 1993 holdout. "I've been disappointed with the way things have unfolded for me because, basically, I haven't been able to test the free agent market.'

The Buccaneers designated Gruber — the former University of Wisconsin star — as their franchise player. As such, he was denied the benefits of free agency but guaranteed a salary at least equal to the average of the top five NFL players at his position.

Cutting to the chase, Gruber had been seeking about $2.6 million per season, while Tampa Bay's best offer was around $2 million. Gruber cited Will Wolf-ord's contract in his argument.

Wolford, an offensive tackle, landed a $2.55 million deal from the Indianapolis Colts. Gruber was merely asking for what was fair. Even if it mean asking for a trade. It actually came to that, too.

And Gruber got his wish — he was traded to the Los Angeles Raiders on Oct. 19, 1993. In the exchange, the Bucs were slated to get some draft picks from the Raiders, pending approval of the trade.

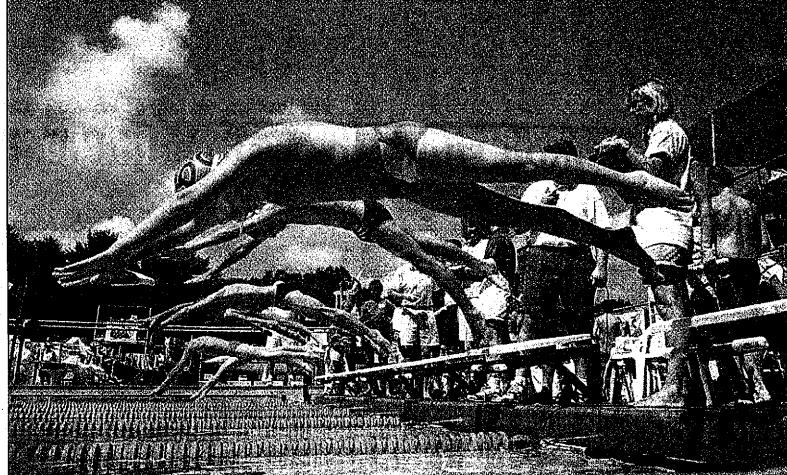

And that's where it all fell apart, because the Raiders and Gruber's agent, Ralph Cindrich, couldn't agree on a long-term contract.

Gruber, thus, remained with Tampa Bay. Shortly thereafter, he signed a new contract after personally huddling with owner Hugh Culverhouse. All told, Gruber missed the first five games of the 1993 season, snapping his streak of 80 consecutive starts for the Bucs.

Tampa Bay tried to gain leverage on Gruber during his holdout by signing tackle Anthony Munoz, who had to be talked out of retirement. The Bucs denied that they Summertime is swimmer time in Madison. Day 1 of the 37th All-City Swim Meet in Madison was Thursday, and not a drop of water was out of place at the Hill Farm Swim Club.

There, swimmers in the 11-12, 13-14 and 15-18 age-groups swam, timers timed, teammates cheered and parents grew anxious as dozens of qualifying heats went off with clockwork precision.

Starting horns sounded, clipboards were gripped and times were posted in the rush to qualify for Saturday's finals.

It all happens all over again today, when the 8-and-under and 9-10 age-groups race for places. By the time all 1,260 swimmers from 12 area pools make it through their heats, they will be whittled down to Madison's very best young swimmers.

They are the ones who get to come back on Saturday morning — the top six for each event's finals, and the next six for consolation races.

Here's a glimpse of what happened on Thursday, when being at Hill Farm was as much about being with your friends and teammates as it was about swimming fast.

Spicing things up: The Shorewood Hills coaches had a surprise for the 141 members of their team — they dressed like the Spice

Megan Smith appeared as Ginger, Missy Younk was Sporty, Colin Vandell was Posh, Noelle Washburn was Scary, Amanda Lieb was Baby, and Jesse Davis dressed as a Spice Girls fan.

"We don't know what they're going to do for Friday," said Shorewood swimmer Kate Austin. "They're planning another surprise."

Fast with a cast: Middleton Pool swimmer Kevin Boyle, 13, wasn't going to let a recent broken arm keep him from the major meet of summer. He fell off his bike last week, but made sure that the cast the doctor put on his arm, from his elbow to his thumb, was waterproof.

"It looked a little heavy, especially in freestyle," Middleton coach Bob Joers said. But he had fun anyway.

Teams of all sizes: No wonder Ridgewood Pool swimmers always seem to win the team trophy — they have the biggest team, at 199. Next biggest are Middleton (165 swimmers), Shorewood Hills Pool (141), Parkcrest Swim & Tennis Club (138) and Monona Swim Club (117).

On the other end, the smallest teams come from Nakoma Swim Club (53), High Point Swim Club and Maple Bluff Swim Club (both 64), and Cherokee Swim Club (71).

Time out from the job: Parents from all the participating pools have signed up for different shifts to take turns timing. For lane 4 on Thursday afternoon, Bill Foust was in charge. Two lanes over was Susan Hamblin.

Foust? Shorewood Hills members know him as the father of Kyle, 11, and James, 7, and a volunteer with swim meets for the last five years. But the rest of Madison knows him as the former District Attorney and a current circuit court judge.

And Hamblin, whose family belongs to High Point, is "Mom" to Mark, 17, and Bridget, 15. But she's also known around Madison as an eight-year member of the City Council, representing District 9. Her husband, Gary Hamblin, was watching from the stands — he's the Dane County Tent city: Organization was the order of the day for the meet, which - beyond the pool — was a collection of tents.

The grass and parking lot were filled with tents for every reason: The University of Wisconsin Sports Medicine team was on hand for injuries and mishaps, and Middleton Cycle and Fitness was selling swim gear. There were also tents for hospitality, selling food, eating food, selling T-shirts, picking up participation ribbons and recovering lost items.

Disrud, Lemon shoot to first-round lead

He reached his goals of making the cut at the Ray Fisher tournament in Janesville and the State Amateur in La Crosse already this summer. He reached another goal

Thursday when he found himself in contention for the Madison Men's City Golf Tournament championship.

Actually, Disrud surpassed the latter goal because he's not just in contention. The 38-year-old golfer shot a 4-under-par 68 at Odana Hills to share the first-round lead with Nakoma Golf Club's Jim Lemon, Maple Bluff's Brian Mur- versity of Wisconsin golf team finphy was one stroke back as the ished fourth at the Fisher and tournament headed to the Meadows at Sixmile Creek in Waunakee today. The third round is at Cherokee Country Club and the final round is at Bishop's Bay.

"This gives me the ability to make the cut if I don't play well (today). That's another goal," joked Disrud.

But the long-hitting Disrud, who had an eagle, four birdies and two bogeys at Odana, admitted he allows himself to dream when it comes to the city tournament. "I'd love to win because it's something I've wanted to do since I was a kid." he said. "I've been playing in this tournament since I was a kid and I've always dreamed of winning it."

Meanwhile, Lemon is a goaloriented golfer, too, and he's has had a good summer surpassing them. The junior-to-be on the Uni23rd at the State Am. A victory at the city tournament would complete a nice trifecta of accomplishments.

Lemon is confident because he loves the rotation. The former Madison West standout played his home prep matches at Odana. He works at Cherokee. And he enjoys playing the Meadows and Bishop's Bay. Plus, Lemon has plenty of friends and family cheering him

"It's almost like a home-course advantage," he said.

Swim meet a real treat

There were tents for every team, as they waited out the schedule. It made for shade, and would also be a respite from rain, should that occur. And, there was the most important tent of all: the clerk of course's seeding tent, where swimmers waited in chairs according to their heats and lanes.

No lack of organization there. High-tech touches: More than 500 swimmers milling about the pool (the younger 700 swimmers go today) — with only six in the water at one time — could have made for a very long line at the pay phone.

But this is the era of cellular phones, and it wasn't just adults using them. Einstein PCS set up a display that featured free local calls, and more than one 13- or 14-year-old girl had a go at them.

"We just call our friends, tell them how we did," giggled Tiffany Jones, 13, of the Cherokee team. 'It's fun. And it's free.

Community support: Continuing a longstanding tradition of the All-City Swim Meet, swimmers are being asked to bring items to donate to the Community Action Coalition for distribution to area families in need.

This year, the meet focusing on rounding up baby-related items: formula, food, juice, cereal for its Baby Supply Drive. So if you go to Hill Farm today or Saturday, don't forget the diapers.

It took an average of 6 hours for each player to complete the second round of the Madison Men's City Golf Tournament Friday at The Meadows of Sixmile Creek. And by the time the final three-some made it off the course just before sundown, there was barely enough sunlight to see the clubhouse, much less where your teeshot was headed.

In short, a very long day.

That was the longest round of golf I've ever had," said co-leader Mark Disrud, who followed up a first-round 68 with a 74 Friday. "I mean, I teed off at 1:15 (p.m.), and I got in at 6:25. Is that not insanity or what? I don't think that's what golf is all about.

"I'm just glad I hung in there." Disrud, 38, and Mike Goode, a 58-year-old retired oral surgeon, hung in there the best. Goode foldowed up a first-round 70 with a 72, the best score of the day and enough to forge a tie atop the deader board with Disrud at 142.

heafti's been a while since I've been in contention," said Goode, who has finished second twice once in the 1970s and once in the 1980s. "It's fun to play and fun to be in contention again.

Entering today's third round at Cherokee Country Club, a group of six golfers are within 5 shots of the leaders — Brian Murphy (144), Troy Bilderback (145), Jim Lemon again.

(146), and C.J. Brock, Mike Douglas and Matt Gerlach (147).

Lemon, Brock and Gerlach, who are teammates on the University of Wisconsin golf team, weren't even born when Goode played his first city tournament in 1970.

"It's tough to compete against these college kids," said Goode, who played collegiately at Michigan and now has two college-age sons. "I can't hit the ball as far as they do anymore, but I try to make up for that by playing a little smarter.'

It took smarts — and determination — to be successful Friday. Lemon, whose 68 had him tied with Disrud after the first round, shot a 78 and didn't think he played that poorly. Brock finished with a 74 and felt like he had played terribly.
With the tournament shifting to Cherokee, the youngsters feel it is to their advantage.

"I feel now we're coming into my territory," said Brock, who works the grounds crew at Chero-kee. "I really think it plays to the guys who play college golf. It's our territory.

Said Lemon, "I'm just ready to play a golf course I know."

Of course, don't be surprised if the "old-timers" hold on. That is, if they can survive for another two

"Do I really want to play tomor-row? Not really," said Disrud, who finished sixth last year and ninth in 1996. "I'm so tired right now, I could care less if I ever play ave McKeith has spent the past two days hosting a pool party for more than 1,200 guests. But he doesn't have to worry about the last swimmers forgetting to put the cover on the pool after the All-City Swim Meet at the Hill Farm Pool concludes today. As meet director, McKeith has plenty of help in seeing that the event goes off with all the precision of synchronized swimming. About 200 volunteers from Hill Farm and another 120 from the other participating pools have given their time and energy for the three-day event.

Without them this probably would never come off. A lot of the people working here have kids in the program, so it's just natural they would do something," McKeith said. "And some people like to be in the thick of things. We probably

LAMPERT SMITH ON WISCONSIN JANESVILLE — I heard it, the plaintive wail of the nightmare, coming through the impenetrable walls of corn: "Mommmeeeeeee!'

It was just like the bad dream, except this time the kid was fine. It was me, the mom, lost in the endless rows of corn.

And this time we were getting lost in the corn for fun, checking out the 10-acre rural version of the urban anxiety dream. City people tend to dream about walking down the street naked and taking surprise exams. Rural moms have nightmares about kids lost in the corn.

And, unlike walking down the street naked, getting lost in rows of 10-foot-tall corn really happens, even to adults.

'I've been lost in the corn myself, looking for an irrigator," said corn maze co-owner Randy Hughes. "You wouldn't think you could lose something that big, but when you're down in the corn, you can't see a thing.

We should have more powers, governors say

■ They're concerned about a reversal of federal willingness to turn over more functions to the states.

By Joseph A. Scolaro Racine Journal Times

MILWAUKEE — The nation's governors say they want more authority to make decisions on such issues as education, welfare reform and Internet taxation.

Speaking during the opening news conference for the National Governors Association meeting, Ohio Republican Gov. George Voinovich said the agenda for the four-day conference will focus on technology, early childhood issues and changes in the global marketplace.

Voinovich, chairman of the National Governors Association, defended his decision not to invite President Clinton to the important political gathering.

"It's a full plate, and it concentrates on what is happening in the states rather than in Washington," Voinovich said Saturday. That is the reason I did not invite the president or the Republican leadership to this

Voinovich said recent years have been historic in that the federal government has cent moves by the White House and Congress have upset governors, he said. "The Clinton administration has completely revised the major federalism executive order," he said.

First created under President Ronald Reagan, and then revised in 1993 by Clinton, the federalism executive order outlines how federal agencies will make rules and regulations covering states.

"Much to our surprise, a new executive" order was unveiled, literally released when the president was in England earlier this summer, one which, frankly, did not go in the direction of greater authority and discretion and flexibility of the states, but one that really called into question the direction we have taken in this country in recent years," said Delaware Democratic Gov. Thomas Carper, vice chairman of the association. He will become the association's chairman at the end of the meeting.

Voinovich said governors in the next several days will talk about the federalism

"In recent years we have witnessed a renaissance of federalism," he said. "The role of the states has grown because states have demonstrated their success in fuelinggrowth, innovation and service to our citi-

Baraboo finds a solution to knotty problem of dams

Working it out took plenty of cooperation

By Richard W. Jaeger

BARABOO - The Baraboo River may no longer be sending water over the dam due to a unique partnership among the city government, the Department of Natural Resources. environmentalists, businesses and a private

These groups say their effort to remove two outdated dams and restore the river could become a model to a growing statewide problem.

As hundreds of the state's dams are passing their expected life spans of 50 years and deteriorating, there is a growing debate over what to do with them.

That debate involves questions of repair vs. removal and who will pay.

Many of the state's nearly 3,500 dams are privately owned. Often it costs thousands of dollars to remove or repair a dam, and most private owners can't afford that. The Baraboo partnership is one of the first community groups to work out and pay for a solution.

"We are really excited about this project," said Sara Johnson, executive director of the River Alliance of Wisconsin, a nonprofit, nonpartisan group organized to promote the protection and restoration of rivers. The Alliance is part of the Baraboo partnership, coordinating much of the interaction, including raising funds.

'We felt it was a unique situation and opportunity to solve the problem faced by other dams around the state. We had three dams in a short stretch of river, all needing repair with different ownerships — one government and two privately owned. The two private dams were the problem. As in most cases, the owner did not have the funds to make repairs or afford removal," Johnson

'It could even become a national model for the cause of dam removal.'

> Tom Bainbridge: DNR water supervisor;

The Alliance supports "selective removal" of dams — and that's what it favored

The Oak Street and old Linen Mill dams are owned by Steven McArthur, who uses them to produce electrical power. The third, the Waterworks dam owned by the city, was removed in April.

The DNR agreed to buy the McArthur dams for $1 each and take steps to remove

According to Tom Bainbridge, Lower Wisconsin River water supervisor for the DNR, the Oak Street dam will be removed in November or December. The DNR has an option on the Linen Mill dam allowing McArthur to produce power until Septem-

The cost of the Oak Street removal, an estimated $60,000, will be paid out of DNR sport fisheries funds.

Bainbridge said he also feels the Baraboo project will be a model for other Wis-consin communities. "It could even become a national model for the cause of dam removal," the DNR chief said.

He said the project is important to the DNR because of intensive studies that can be conducted on the water quality, fisheries and wildlife before the removal of the dams and after.

He and others believe the four-mile section of river will return to the bubbling rapids once known as the Baraboo Rapids. This will improve game fishing and provide other recreation opportunities for canoeing and

Still, the taste testers must put aside their biases and dig in to help the lab distinguish the dry from the really dry, the crumbly from the spongy.

The volunteers are participating in one of the lab's taste panels and must evaluate specific characteristics of a set of five cakes. Among their charge is to gauge the color intensity and the uniformity of the cupcakes' surface. Is that surface rough or smooth? How even are the pockets of air inside the cakes and how tender are the crumbs? Are the cakes gummy and sticky?

Bomb fear spurs airport evacuation

The Dane County Regional Airport was evacuated Saturday afternoon when security officials found what they thought was a bomb in a suitcase.

It turned out not to be a bomb at all, but a harmless combination flashlight-alarm that had gone off in the unclaimed luggage.

Airport Deputy Director Rod McLean said airline employees removed the unclaimed suitcase from a luggage carousel about 3:30 p.m. He said the employees heard a ticking noise coming from the bag and turned it over to airport security officials.

"This thing had batteries and wires and there was also an alarm clock in there," McLean said. "The Xray people were quite concerned about it."

As a result, McLean said, the airport was evacuated and the Madison bomb squad called. But the "bomb" turned out to be a contraption designed to alert occupants of a motel room of intruders.

The owner of the suitcase arrived on a later flight, McLean said.

The incident delayed incoming and outgoing flights for more than an hour, McLean said. He added that it's the first time in the seven years he's worked at the airport that the building has been evacuated for such an event.

A record-setting meet for Evans

Ridgewood defends its team title

By J. Andrew Cohen

Somehow, what seems clearly attainable and easily quantifiable often eludes our grasp.

The subject is balance, and the test grades are low. Most people struggle to eat a balanced diet, to maintain a balanced relationship and to keep a balanced set of priorities.

Then there is Jane Evans, an ideal symbol of everything that makes the Madison All-City Swim Meet the balanced success story that it is: contagious fun, intense competition and unabashed spirit.

Many in her position would have skipped the 3-day event at Hill Farm Pool and flown early to Buffalo, N.Y., where Evans will compete at the U.S. Junior National Championships beginning this afternoon.

Anyone who didn't know of Evans promptly took notice after she broke age-group meet records in the 100-meter individual medley and 100 breaststroke. Her medley time of 1 minute, 6.91 seconds broke the previous meet standard of 1:07.46 set by Monona's Paige Freiman in 1989, and Evans beat her own breaststroke mark by clocking a 1:13.73.

"My main goal is to get my best times," Evans said. "But if a re-cord comes with it then that's nice, too. These were both (personal) best times, so I'm pretty happy

She joked with friends, brushed her hair and blended in — outside the pool, anyway - with the 1,200plus competitors.

"It's nothing new," Evans said of her quick turnaround. "I've done it before.

She placed sixth at Junior Nationals in the 200 breaststroke last year — in the senior division against girls up to 19 years old and hopes to improve on that showing today.

Come fall, Evans will start her freshman year at Madison Memorial. Claire Mowbray, who is entering her sophomore year at Memorial and set a girls 13-14 meet record Saturday in the 100 backstroke, is eager to join forces.

"We've gotten to know each other and this year we became pretty good friends," Mowbray said after winning the 100 backstroke and 100 freestyle to help Ridgewood defend its team title in convincing fashion. "I'm really excited for her to be on the team."

Ridgewood rolled to the team championship, with Middleton second and Packcrest third in the 12club competition. The entire meet had a family feel to it, further solidifying Evans as a perfect repre-

■ The women's basketball team almost always plays its Big Ten games Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

■ The hockey team ordinarily plays its two-game series Friday and Saturday nights.

change the building from a hockey rink to a basketball arena and vice versa.

the various parties went about seeing how the pieces could fit together. As it turns out, women's basketball is the least affected because of its relatively few TV commitments, the fact the Big Ten is fairly rigid in its Friday-Sunday alignment and, according to Marra, the fact the UW women have only two Sunday home the WIAA state wrestling tournament is in limbo because it has the misfortune of falling on the same weekend as a men's basketball game and a hockey series.

'Right now they're on our calendar," Martin said of the WIAA, which also is scheduled to play its boys and girls state basketball tournaments at the Kohl Center.

As mentioned, there are a lot of players being dealt into this organizational card game. Of course, the NCAA, Big Ten Conference and WCHA are involved. So are administrators from the UW Athletic Department, Kohl Center and WIAA. So are the three head coaches, including women's basketball coach Jane Albright-Dieterle. And there are no less than four network television interests: CBS, ESPN/ESPN2, Mid-Sports Channel and west Wisconsin Public Television.

In fact, the primary reason why the three UW schedules have been held up is that the Big Ten has only recently completed its rundown of men's basketball games on TV. Marra said final approval should come Wednesday.

"Since TV will dictate a great deal of our scheduling, that, then, puts everyone on hold," she said. The process of organizing this three-ring circus starts with sev-

And it's not easy to get some to take their medicine. "You can get angry and frustrated," Marra said, "but it doesn't put the pieces together." Meanwhile, UW athletic ticket manager Terry Cooksey is waiting patiently for the go-ahead to print basketball and hockey tickets. We have the designs worked out, but no dates or opponents," he said.

Virtually everyone involved expects the process to be easier next year when a lot of the unknowns have been eliminated, but right now there is a good deal of consternation within the ranks. Moss said his Olympic experiences have come in handy in recent months. "If nothing else, having to deal team will welcome Fresno State and renegade coach Jerry Tarkanian Dec. 27, while Rhode Island, which fell one game short of a trip to the Final Four last spring, has been tabbed to fill the Nov. 25 slot vacated last month by Central Michigan. The women's basketball team will host fellow NCAA tournament qualifiers in Rutgers (Jan. 17), UC-Santa Barbara (Nov. 20) and instate rival Marquette (Dec. 3). The hockey Badgers will host the College Hockey Showcase, which includes dates with perennial power Michigan State (Nov. 27) and defending NCAA champion Michigan (Nov. 29). A date with Notre Dame in the U.S. Hockey Hall of Fame game marks the debut of hockey at the Kohl Center Oct. 3.

Courthouse plan deserves hearing

Dane County Executive Kathleen Falk's plan to build a $20.5 million criminal justice center solves most. if not all, of the county's short-range space problems and leaves room for growth. instead of dismissing it as just another patchwork solution, the county's circuit udges should give Falk's proposal a fair

As part of her five-part capital budget olan, Falk proposed building a criminal ustice center that would:

Add nine courtrooms. ■ House a 28-bed juvenile lentention center, expandable to 50

Consolidate the district attorney's offices into one spot.

It would be built behind the county Public Safety Building, which is bounded by Doty, Carroll and Wilson Streets, beginning in 2003. It would be connected to the City-County Building by a skywalk. It would be three stories high: more stories could be added later.

The county's judges and some members of the Dane County Board seem less than thrilled with Falk's plan. They want a $38 million, six-story courthouse that would consolidate all of the justice system's various offices in one building. Chief Justice Dan Moeser even went so far as to describe Falk's idea as temporary, partial and, ultimately, more expensive.

"The proposal makes a bad situation worse," Moeser said.

It's hard to see how picking up nine courtrooms, a new juvenile detention center and consolidating the D.A.'s offices makes a bad situation worse. Maybe it's not perfect, but it's definitely an improvement on the status quo. In a perfect world, Falk might have endorsed spending $38 million on a dream courthouse. In our less-thanperfect world, there are finite public resources. The courthouse needed to compete with other priorities within the capital budget.

For years, the judges were unable to get even a toehold in the county's capital budget. Now they have a $20.5 million plan and a 2003 construction date, which ought to be seen as light at the end of the tunnel. Instead, the judges see it as a freight train, bearing down on their more palatial hopes.

County Board chairman Kevin Kesterson thinks Falk's plan, with some modifications, can be made to work for the judges without breaking the taxpayer bank. Before the judges talk too much about refusing to approve the plan — something that is legally possible, but politically naive — they need to work with Falk, Kesterson and members of the county's Space Needs and Masterplan Committee.

One solution: If safety for victims and witnesses is a concern, concentrate judges assigned primarily to criminal cases in the new facility and keep those assigned primarily to civil cases in the City-County Building.

Falk's plan is a honest attempt at compromise. Before the judges bang their gavels and pronounce sentence, they need to give it a fair trial.

Swim meet shows hope for the future

If the headlines about juvenile crime, declining student performance in schools and deteriorating family life have you feeling glum about America's future, consider last week's All-City Swim Meet in Madison.

The three-day event — preceded by the equally impressive but smaller All-City Dive Meet — was an inspiring show for which the organizers, participants and parents deserve credit.

Nearly 1,250 children put on display the results of a summer's hard work in the water. From the fastest 18-year-old headed for a college scholarship to the soggiest 7-year-old who struggled just to finish to the parents waiting with hugs and dry towels, everybody was a winner.

The most impressive feature of the meet may well have been that its director, Dave McKeith, and his 320 volunteers got things to run almost like clockwork at the Hill Farm Swim Club on the city's West Side.

Imagine. There were 1,250 competitors, a majority of whom were under the age of 11. The organizers posted a schedule of event times, as if anyone could get 1,250 kids to do anything on schedule. Laughable, right? Wrong. It worked.

For anyone who has ever tried to get a child ready for school on time, the meet proved there is hope.

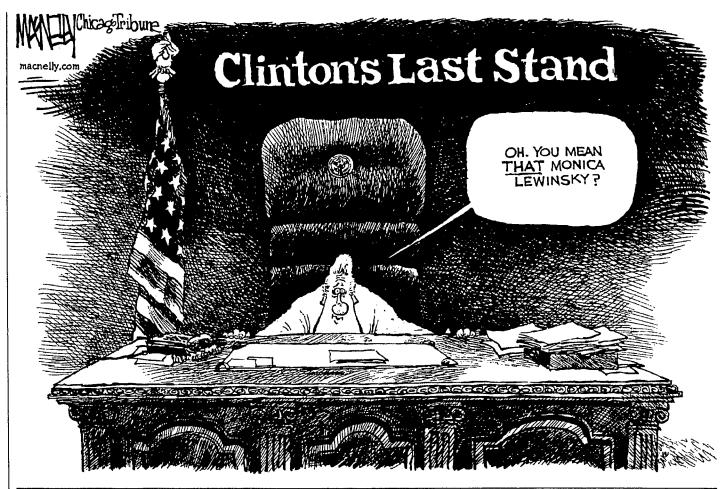

Moreover, the meet showed how competition, kept in perspective, can bring out the best in kids and parents.

Slower swimmers who improved upon their previous best times smiled just as broadly as the fastest swimmers who collected first-place medals.

Parents hugged children who had just broken records, and parents hugged children heartbroken because they failed to meet expectations.

And everybody appeared to be cheering for everybody else.

The world would be a better place if there were more smiles and more hugs, more people trying to do their best and more people cheering for one another. Madison's annual All-City Swim Meet showed this year that there are plenty of children, parents and volunteers who can, indeed, make the world — or at least part of the world — a better place.

Bias widens gap between media, public

A strange thing happened to news coverage of affirmative action in the city of Houston. When the issue was on the city's ballot last fall, national news media gave the story lavish attention. Houston Mayor Bob Lanier led a fight to defeat the Houston Civil Rights Initiative — a measure challenging the city government's race and gender hiring policies and contracting set-asides. When the measure went down to defeat by a 54-46 margin, once again TV, newspapers and magazines played the story big.

But a month ago, when a judge threw out the results of the Houston election and ordered a new vote, the media weren't very interested. In Texas, the story was well-covered, but outside the state there was very little media attention, and in some areas, none at all. The New York Times, for example, gave it six sentences on Page 13 in the last edition of a Saturday issue.

In contrast, when the referendum results came in on Nov. 6. the Times trumpeted the story on Page One. A long report said, with some zest, "Houston's voters have put a surprising brake on a national movement that has often seemed to have the momentum of an unstoppable freight train." But when the surprising brake proved faulty, the story seemed surprisingly minor. This seems true of the three major network news shows, too. A computer search of transcripts turned up no evidence that they reported the overturning of the Houston vote.

Leo is a contributing editor for U.S. News & World Report magazine. His column runs Tuesdays on the State Journal Opinion page.

Seattle Times, decided to make an issue of the media performance on this story, at least in her hometown. She wrote a column criticizing her own paper: In the 10 days between the judge's decision and her column, the Seattle Times hadn't printed a story. She had learned about the judge's ruling from friends in California. No newspaper in Washington state carried the story, even though an upcoming statewide vote on a measure similar to Houston's is a hot political issue now.

"Given its exhaustive coverage of the Houston election in 1997," Malkin wrote, "the Times' absolute silence is extraordinary. . . . Sins of omission can be as damaging to the news media's credibility as sins of commission.'

To its credit, the Seattle Times responded last week with an explanation that amounted to a semi-apology. Under the headline "Times Gave Story on Houston Ballot Measure Short Shrift," the executive editor of the paper, Michael R. Fancher, said the story had been overlooked in an awkward weekend news cycle. It had come to the Associated Press from Texas late on a Friday, and the AP had not included it on the wire report sent to Washington

The Times missed it, Fancher said, because the first version of the judge's ruling that moved on the AP wire received at the Times was available for Saturday evening papers, but the Times doesn't publish on Saturday evening, and the editors working on the Sunday paper focused on the Sunday material, not the stories in the previous day's

Well, OK. People make mistakes, and the AP feed to the Northwest was partly responsible for the sloppiness. But what about the national media? Many have specialists who are supposed to follow issues as important as affirmative action. For many newspapers, the story may have fallen into the crack between Saturday and Sunday papers, but where was the follow-up? A computer search shows only one major non-Texas daily the Washington Times — publishing a full report later in the week. And it didn't take much news judgment to see that this was an important story: A judge canceled the results of the referendum because supporters of affirmative action preferences had tinkered with the language on the ballot to make sure the voting went their way.

This linguistic tampering has failed to survive judicial review in California, Washington state and now Houston. Judge Sharolyn Wood said it was unfair to remove the original wording, taken from the 1964 Civil Rights Act ("The City of Houston shall not discriminate against, or grant preferential treatment to, any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, ethnicity or national origin.

.") and to replace it with language that seemed to state that all affirmative action efforts were being banned, not just clear race and gender preferences "Shall the Charter of the City of Houston be amended to end the use of affirmative action for women and minorities

In admitting its mistake, the Seattle Times acknowledged the issue of press bias: "Failing to come back with a complete story about the Houston ruling feeds that perception, which critics use for partisan gain."

Yes, bias is an issue. More and more people now understand that the selection and treatment of news stories often reflect the social views of reporters and editors rather than any nonpartisan or allegedly objective standard. Our news room culture is so strongly committed to affirmative action that a lot of reporting on the subject is simply unreliable. The same is true on other hot-button social issues. Particularly on the two coasts, journalism is becoming an upper-class occupation. It attracts and trains people who come to share the social views conventional among our elites. These opinions are pumped into news coverage, first by osmosis, then through a determination to do good by doing journalism. It's widening the gap between the media and the rest of us.

Disagreement does not translate to hate

The forces of censorship and intolerance achieved a new level of status and credibility when the Madison City Council, responding to the demands of the homosexual activists, proclaimed Madison a 'City of Tolerance.'

Tolerant of whom? Certainly not those of us with deeply held spiritual and moral convictions that homosexual behavior is both wrong and harmful. Certainly not those whose religious traditions and personal sensitivities are assaulted by the out-of-the-closet, inyour-face demands that homosexuality should not only be tolerated, but celebrated.

While some may be bullied into silence with accusations of hatred and bigotry, such verbal mudwrestling will not silence or change such convictions.

As long as the homosexual activists insist on regarding disagreement as hate, there can and will be no dialogue. I disapprove of lying, cheating stealing and drug abuse, yet I don't hate the liar, cheater, thief or drug addict. Those who would accuse me of hatred simply because I disapprove, are guilty of a very ugly form of social censorship and ought to get the log of intolerance out of their own eye before they try to gouge the speck out of mine.

Continue 'quiet' talks on scripture, gays

If we only read headlines, see banners and placards and listen to the loudest voices, we will miss a quieter and better opportunity.

In the past few months "liberal" and "conservative" clergy have met to discuss the question of what the scriptures say about homosexuality. We have not agreed. We have met face to face and talked about the issues of bigotry and tolerance and of sin and forgiveness.

I hope this quiet discussion will continue. I also hope that the citizens of Madison will agree to speak to each other face to face, and not about each other in the media. Even if we do not agree, we will better understand our disagreement. Disagreement does not constitute hate. Respect is a twosided commitment.

Biblical story of Sodom is about rape, not gays

In the July 25 State Journal, two who assert that homosexual behav- letters insisted on using the Sodom ior is compatible with Biblical story (Genesis 19) to condemn ho-Christian teaching...they are mosexuality. This use of the Sodom story either reveals that the writers of these letters are perverts, or they simply cannot think straight when the subject of homosexuality comes up.

> Consider the parallel story in Judges 19. There the visitors are a Levite and his concubine. When the house is surrounded by the mob the Levite bravely throws his concubine to the mob (he was a heterosexual, after all), and the mob proceeds to gang-rape the concubine (apparently they also were heterosexuals). Come morning the Levite finds the concubine lying at the door. Not yet knowing that she was dead he tells her, "Get up, let's go." No doubt heterosexual males believe such words are endearing after the night she

> Is this the proper use of Judges 19, to condemn all heterosexuality? Should we use Genesis 19, a case of attempted rape, to condemn all homosexuality? Then why do these people insist on using the Sodom story when they attack homosexuality? Are they perverts who cannot tell the difference between rape and consensual sex? Or are they incapable of sensible Bible reading when they hit a hot topic?

> In short, when someone uses the Sodom story in the debate on homosexuality I assume nothing else they have to say will make any

Gay man says God loves him as he is

To Christians who criticize gays and lesbians: Stop talking about us as if we are non-believers.

I happen to be a Christian. I know Jesus Christ as my personal savior. I speak with God daily. And he knows I am gay. He made me

I believe in the Bible. I believe in its message. I do not believe in your narrow interpretation.

Recently, an ad in USA Today referred to "harsh language from homosexual activists." The ad further refers to tolerance as a virtue. However, right-wing Christians repeatedly refer to homosexuality as a concrete-we-can't-debate-it "sin." That is not tolerance. That is dictatorship.

The truth? You don't seem to be able to handle the truth. God created us to be who we are. God is not a dictatorial God. God is not a hateful God. God is love.

Perhaps someday you'll realize

Readers air their views on homosexuality issues

Gay man says religion drives discrimination

I am a gay man who would like to respond to the ignorance of recent letter-writer Molly Murphy. Murphy's judgmental view of sexuality led her to write such nonsense as "most people don't hang up flags advertising their sexual activity.

Only bigoted heterosexuals define homosexuals by their assumed sexual behavior. Gays and lesbians define ourselves by something more intricate: our inherent sexuality. Heterosexuals target us for discrimination based upon their chosen religious beliefs.

Are we supposed to remain silent while they lie about us and demonize us? While they deny us basic civil rights? Murphy's hangups are irrelevant to whether I should be treated fairly under the law. My sexuality is as natural for me as heterosexuality is for her. She has no business forcing her chosen religious beliefs on laws that affect my well-being.

Vote was morally right, not result of gay clout

While I appreciate the State Journal's coverage of an important issue, I must admit that I found offensive the headline of your frontpage story of July 9, "Council vote shows gays have political clout in Madison.

Despite the thoughtless rhetoric of the Christian right, perhaps what the unanimous council vote in favor of the resolution supporting tolerance shows is that our elected officials have the backbone to do what is morally right. Somehow I suspect that a great majority, if not all, of those unanimous votes would have been cast in exactly the same manner even if there were not one gay voter in Madison. I'll let cynicism stay the domain of the gay-bashers who

St. Paul visitor taken aback by signs

During a recent visit, I was taken on a sightseeing drive through parts of Madison. I consider Madison and Middleton to be lovely cities but was taken aback by lawn signs proclaiming "Madison Supports Its Gay and Lesbian Community." It was explained to me that these signs were a retort to a religious group's antihomosexual billboards.

I have to wonder: Are the lawn signs posted by people who consider themselves liberals or by conservative homosexuals? It would seem that an apt retort to a conservative view (whomever those conservatives may represent) would be an open-minded statement such as "Madison Supports Free-Thinking" or "Madison Supports Individual Rights.'
